Movies Reveal the Panay Outrage—Page 10A

This first in a series of pictures by Norman Alley on the bombing of the Panay shows sailors with life preservers preparing to leave the gunboat after the "abandon ship" order was given. Note the flag on the gig with outboard motor. The boat was machine-gunned as it attempted to reach safety.

Paris Utility Strike Ends; Army Called

Paris (Thursday), Dec. 30 (A.P.).—The Paris trade unions today ordered the strike of 140,000 municipal workers ended.

Emerging from an all-night conchiefs, who had previously conchiefs, whi had previously conferred with Minister of the Interior Marx Dormoy, announced that all municipal employes would resume work this morning.

Terms of the settlement were not announced.

Compromise Reported.

[The Paris municipal council, acting through Minister Dormoy, agreed to give the workers a living allowance at a compromise figure between their demands and the previous council offer, the Associated Press reported.]

The strike had tied up subways, public utilities and other municipal services here since midnight Tuesday, when the workers walked out because they received a monthly pay increase only half of that given government workers.

It was understood that the trade unions agreed to halt the strike upon promise of speedy negotiations for settlement of the workers' grievances.

For a time it appeared the government of Premiere Camille Chau-

Scott Hart today writes:

"Is it true that the Federal employe unions look disapprovingly upon those mild recreational and social organizations in the Government service? We're told so. It was said that the unions feel the social groups offer a strong appeal to the joiner-minded who might join the unions if the pull wasn't so strong from the social groups."

Miami Couple Told Daughter Is Woman 'Missing' in Soviet

Miami, Dec. 29 (A.P.).—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Boerger said tonight they had been advised their daughter and her husband were the couple detained by the Soviet government in Moscow on an espionage charge.

They were told it had been established that a "Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Arnold Rubens" were the couple held in Moscow and identified previously only as "Mr. and Mrs. Donald Robinson."

Mr. and Mrs. Boerger are American citizens of German descent. They have not heard from their daughter and son-in-law in more than a month.

The Rubens' left New York October 19 for Paris, planning to continue on to Moscov. where Rubens, who had often expressed admiration for the Russian form of government, would be able to get first-hand knowledge of the Soviet regime, the Boergers said.

The Rubens' had been married nearly three years. They met in New York when Rubens answered an advertisement in which English lessons for foreigners were offered.

Rubens described himself as a Latvian. He was able financially to help the Boergers establish their home here, the elder couple said. They said he was vice president of the Galleon Press, a publishing concern in New York.

Heflin Placed In Oxygen Tent And Given Drugs

By the Associated Press.

Lafayette, Ala., Dec. 29. — J. Thomas Heflin, 68-year-old former Senator, was placed under an oxygen tent today at Wheeler Hospital, where he is ill with lobar pneumonia.

Dr. N. A. Wheeler described Heflin as "sicker than the average man suffering from lobar pneumonia," but said he was resting somewhat better than he did yesterday.

"Senator Heflin has not passed a crisis," Dr. Wheeler said, adding that maximum doses of drugs were being used to "modify" his temperature and pulse.

Heflin's illness interrupted his campaign for nomination to the United States Senate in next Tuesday's special Democratic primary.

G.M.C. Chief Is Called in Job Inquiry

Green Also to Testify as Senators Delve Into Idleness.

The Senate's committee on unemployment yesterday announced it had called William S. Knudsen, president of the General Motors Corporation, to testify January 6 in its investigation of causes and conditions of idleness, an inquiry which, it appears, may extend well beyond its original outlines.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, is scheduled to appear the same day Knudsen has been called, Pierce Williams, the committee's counsel, said. In Detroit, Knudsen said, however, he had requested the committee to permit him to appear January 28 because of previous arrangements for a business trip.

On Tuesday Knudsen announced curtailed markets would force General Motors to lay off 30,000 employes January 1.

Awaits Budget Message.

The investigation will be begun just after President Roosevelt sends to Congress his budget message. The relief recommendations he makes are expected to decide whether efforts to present a balanced budget have been successful. A number of Senators have said they do not believe such a balance is possible, in view of employment conditions.

The United Press yesterday disclosed a $42,414,500 reduction in the Veterans' Administration budget has been proposed to Congress. This sum chiefly represented decreased outlays for military and naval insurance, but $1,000,000 ap-

Gains Made On 5 Fronts By Japanese

Scattered Forces of Defenders Blast, Burn in Flight.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 30.—Japan's war machine drove forward on five fronts today, as scattered defenders retreated into China's interior, dynamiting and burning as they fled.

Only in the northwest, where Gen. Chu Teh, China's "Red Napoleon," has emerged from the Shansi Mountain country to take advantage of Japan's preoccupation along the seaboard, did the Chinese appear to be holding their own.

Areas Reported Recaptured.

Chu, working with Marshal Yen Hsi-Han, pacification commissioner of Shansi, was attempting to sever the Japanese connections with Hopei by striking at the Chengting-Taiyuan Railroad, and according to Chinese reports had reoccupied the areas below the Wutai Mountains.

The huge five-pronged fork Japan is plunging into the heart of China was spread over a 500-mile front from Shantung on the north to Chekiang on the south.

Five Campaigns Outlined.

The five campaigns:

Shantung, where Japanese columns were boring southwestward from Tsinan, the capital.

The Chekiang campaign, where the fiercest fighting has occurred as Japanese columns, after occupying the beautiful port city of Hangchow, are pushing southwestward.

Tsingtao Is Target.

In addition, a punitive expedition is sweeping down over the rich Shantung peninsula toward Tsingtao, former German port on the lower Shantung coast, where Chinese dynamited $100,000,000 worth of Japanese-owned cotton mills ten days ago.

Hundreds of foreigners, including many Americans, were fleeing, endangered by approaching hostilities from without and threats of terrorism within the city.

Chinese sources reported that the Shansi defense armies, taking advantage of the withdrawal of Japanese troops from the Shantung campaign, had attacked Japanese lines in eastern Shansi and "reoccupied 16 counties."

Panay Bomb Outrage Unreeled Behind Guarded Gates of Fort

Norman Alley's Film Then Sped to Government Officials at Washington and to Theaters in All Parts of United States.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—Behind the guarded gates of a Fort Lee, N. J., laboratory, observers tonight saw a graphic preview of the sinking of the gunboat Panay, two hours after Norman Alley, cameraman, had completed his 12,000-mile dash from China.

Flown across the Pacific by a clipper ship, and from San Francisco by an airliner, the 4,500-foot picture story of the attack by Japanese bombing planes on the American warcraft was hurried into the hands of film technicians by an escort of State troopers.

All Phases Are Shown.

Reel after reel showed the sailing of the Panay from Nanking with war refugees, the unexpected attack of the Japanese planes, the futile defense of the ship's crew with machine guns, abandonment of the sinking vessel, and, finally, the arduous trip through Chinese marshes to Hantshan.

Alley, wounded on the Panay by shell splinters, explained the views, calling attention frequently to American flags plainly seen on the little gunboat.

One scene showed the explosion of an air bomb astern as two Japanese warplanes circled overhead. Close-ups revealed the wounds of victims.

Films Released at Once.

Alley brought back a complete series of the "Panay incident" from the time the 450-ton ship took aboard refugees at Nanking until rescue ships delivered the dead and wounded to the American flagship at Shanghai.

Departing from custom, naval officials ordered the films released without an official preview. The first set of prints went to Washington, to be shown before Government officials. Other prints went to theaters in all parts of the country.

Jackson Sees Big Business 'Strike' Plot

U. S. Attorney Charges Monopolies Plan to Kill New Deal.

The Business Outlook.

Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson said "monopolistic" concentrations of wealth had gone on "strike" in an effort "to liquidate the New Deal."

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland economist, predicted the business slump would hit bottom in the first half of 1938 and the year's business be generally poor.—Page 2.

Jett Lauck, United Mine Workers adviser, foresaw an ultimately united labor movement.

Jackson Sees 'Strike.'

By Franklyn Waltman.

Another sharp attack on big business came from the Administration yesterday when Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson charged monopolistic concentration of wealth had gone on "a strike to force a liquidation of the New Deal.

Speaking before the American Political Science Association in Philadelphia, Jackson termed this alleged attitude of capital as "a strike against the Government—a strike to coerce political action." He declared that "the blunt truth is that today we have in command of big business by and large the same bourbons who were in command of the defeat of 1929 and who since then have learned nothing and forgotten nothing."

It was the Assistant Attorney-General's second attack on big business in four days. On Sunday night he charged the industrial recession was due to monopolistic price increases. The two speeches it appeared, formed part of a series, with the third coming tonig-

U. S. Executives to Extend Group Health Plan; City Medical Society Is Accused of 'Ostracism'

Determination to extend a system of group medical care to 40,000 Federal workers was announced yesterday by executives in 15 Government departments and agencies in a report which charged the District Medical Society with virtual professional ostracism of staff physicians of the Group Health Association, Inc.

The report also accused organized physicians in the District with attempting to encourage hospitals to deny the use of their facilities to members of the G. H. A. staff. The report continued:

"Although it is evident many local physicians are in sympathy with the Group Health Association program, nevertheless the organized medical profession in the District is opposed to the plan and is taking various steps to prevent its operation. The Medical Society has employed attorneys to defeat it legally in the courts."

The report also charged organized physicians with "intensive lobbying" in order to induce members of Congress to force the Home Owners Loan Corporation to withdraw its financial support of GHA.

The report said its drafters would carry forward their own group health plans patterned after the GHA, which the HOLC has allotted $40,000. Apparently referring to a study of the legality of GHA being made by Elwood Seal, District corporation counsel, the report declared the plan would be put into effect as soon as "the way opens."

Seal has indicated he will find the GHA is operating as an insurance company and therefore is legal. A report on his findings is expected today.

The executives, organized as the committee for co-operative medical service for Federal workers, resolved:

"That the objectives which motivated the formation of this committee will have been largely obtained by the success, development along proper lines, and expansion of the Group Health Association plan.

"That the committee . . . is greatly encouraged by what the Group Health Association has done, as well as by its plans for the future, and will carry forward its own plans on similar lines as the way opens."

The committee praised the medical staff of GHA as "well trained and qualified," and the clinic at 1328 I street northwest, as "well equipped and well appointed."

GHA will establish "as soon as

Owner Slain, Six Are Rescued In Tragedy on Mystery Yacht

By the Associated Press.

San Pedro, Calif., Dec. 29.—Dwight Faulding, wealthy 49-year-old hotel owner, was found strangely shot to death and six yachting companions, who had been without food three days, were rescued from his boat in the Pacific today.

Only a bare outline of the mysterious tragedy was given in radio advices after the yacht was sighted by a Coast Guard plane 190 miles south of Los Angeles.

Those rescued were Mrs. Gertrude Turner and her 8-year-old son, Robert, of Dos Pueblos Rancho, Goleta, Calif.; Mrs. Jack Morgan, Los Angeles; Miss Elsie Berdan, Los Angeles; George Spernak, Los Angeles, and Robert Horn, deck hand.

The distressed craft was the 51-foot yacht Aafje, aboard which Faulding had been living since he leased the Faulding Hotel in Santa Barbara five months ago. Faulding formerly operated a photo studio at Santa Barbara, which he turned over to his wife there following a separation two years ago.

The rescue was made by the Coast Guard cutter Perseus, which reported that choppy seas would prevent it from making port until midnight Saturday.

Faulding was sighted stretched on the deck by a Coast Guard plane. The amphibian alighted near the distressed vessel today and radioed back that Faulding had been shot.

The schooner's mainsail had been carried away. Food and water were exhausted three days ago, the Perseus notified Coast Guard headquarters.

U.S. Leadership In Peace Urged By McReynolds

Japan's Apology Does Not End Far East Problem, He Declares.

Warning that Japan's note of December 24, apalogizing for the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay, "does not end the Far Eastern affair," Representative Sam McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, last night said the issue of whether international relations "are to be governed by law or by violence" remained unsolved.

That issue, he urged in a radio speech over facilities of the Columbia Broadcasting System, should be met through assumption by the United States "of a policy of leadership in the search for peace."

"For some years," he said, "it might have been unpopular for anyone to suggest to his fellow citizens that the United States had a responsibility of leading . . . But in the world community, as in the local community, wealth, power and position produce comparable opportunities and responsibilities of leadership.

Demands U. S. Take Lead.

"At the moment when the United States abandons its confusion and isolation, and steps forward in a policy of leadership . . . the world will be on the road to recovery."

Urging insistence upon the sanctity of treaties, McReynolds said: "It would seem that the policy of isolation and withdrawal will do nothing to protect American security, still less to maintain the sanctity of treaties. As a matter of fact, the very insistence upon a policy of isolation means the abandonment of the family of nations as far as we are concerned. There is reason to believe that this policy actually encourages law violation.

Assails Ludlow Measure.

The Ludlow resolution, proposing an amendment requiring referenda prior to entry into war, was cited by McReynolds as an isolationist measure which would "unconsciously" encourage "war in the name of peace."

"We can imagine the militarists of Japan reaching the conclusion," he said, "not that the United States is opposed to waging aggressive warfare, but that the United States is so craven, so prosperous, so soft, that it will not insist upon the sanctity of treaties, nor even upon the safety of the lives of its own citizens."

The Tennesseean also argued that the Ludlow amendment "would destroy the long-established principles of the Monroe Doctrine," would render defense of the Panama Canal questionable and was unnecessary because "we have outlawed war as an instrument of national policy" in the Kellogg-Briand pact.

Against Withdrawal.

Turning to arguments the United States should withdraw all armed forces from the China war zones, McReynolds said "we would simply renounce our interests" in an area the population of which "comprises one-fourth of the world." He further denied these interests were "simply those of bankers and shipowners," citing cotton sales to the Orient.

Above all, he urged, withdrawal by the United States, "the strongest nation," would "of necessity be followed by the retreat of others less powerful than ourselves."

"By that time," he warned, "we would not have a world worth living in."

Peace Groups Heard.

On the opposing side of the debate over the Ludlow amendment, the National Council for Prevention of War issued, on behalf of itself and four other peace groups, a statement charging "those Democratic spokesmen who are loudest today in denouncing a referendum voted in 1924 to propose the plan as a part of the party platform."

The Democratic platform of that year, the statement said, indorsed the war referendum plan "except in case of actual or threatened attack" because "those who must furnish the blood and bear the burdens" should "be consulted."

Ex-Rep. Rankin Appeals.

President Roosevelt, Vice President Garner and Secretaries Swanson, Farley and Roper were delegates to the 1924 convention, the council said, adding that Secretary of State Hull was chairman of the party's national committee at the time, Attorney General Cummings was chairman of the platform committee, and Senator Pittman, of Nevada, was secretary of the platform committee.

Former Representative Jeanette Rankin, who voted against declaration of war in 1917, when she was the sole woman House member, also struck a blow for the Ludlow amendment last night. In a radio speech, she appealed to women to write the President, and their Senators and Representatives, urging passage of the resolution.

Politics and People

Alibi for New Deal's Economic Failures Seen in Jackson's Flogging of Big Business.

By Franklyn Waltman

WALTMAN.

IF THE last two speeches of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson are any barometer of Administration strategy—and there is reason to believe they are—it would appear that President Roosevelt is more interested in playing politics than in seeking a solution of the industrial recession afflicting the country and growing worse.

Mr. Jackson apparently has been selected as the bell-wether of a studiously deliberate and nicely-timed effort to persuade the country that the business community is responsible for the present decline in economic activity, not the fallacious policies pursued by the New Deal for five years. Indeed, it is becoming obvious that a political strategist has shoved Mr. Jackson to the front to give respectability to what is beginning to shape up as an exhibition of demagogy as cheap as any the country has ever witnessed.

Within four days the able and politically-ambitious Mr. Jackson has delivered two speeches severely flogging big business, first on the ground that it has destroyed its prosperity by artificially raising prices, and, secondly, that, just to thwart the President, capital has gone on a sit-down strike.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes tonight is scheduled to press this point further and, unless popular reaction is too sour to those efforts, the President next Monday and at the Jackson Day dinner on January 8 will add the final touch to this scourging of big business as the devil in the present situation. It looks like a Salem witch hunt all over again—but let us not forget that burning old crones never cured any cases of diphtheria.

Nor will New Deal flogging of big business put anybody back to work or encourage capital to come out of its hiding and stimulate the economic body. The situation calls for more than accusations and recriminations and much more than talk. It calls for an adjustment of fundamentals underlying the American economic structure.

Let it be said at this point that Mr. Jackson's sincerity in believing that monopolistic practices are a serious threat to maintenance of an economy of private enterprise in this country is not questioned here. And let it be said that he is correct. But let also be recorded the suspicion that he is being used as a cat's-paw to pull New Deal chestnuts out of the political fire.

Such a suspicion is based on the well-known fact that until the New Deal fell into the pit of its own economic fallacies, neither the President nor anyone else in the New Deal in a position to influence policies showed any sympathy whatever for Mr. Jackson's views or any desire to restrict monopoly.

What does Mr. Jackson mean when he says that "the wrath of the people has been rising as they have seen Uncle Sam told to stick up his hands and deliver over . . . his monopoly program?" What "monopoly program?" Does Mr. Jackson refer to the encouragement given to monopoly and price-fixing by the NRA and its big-business-controlled code authorities?

Does Mr. Jackson refer to the anger of the President when the Supreme Court struck down this encouragement to monopoly and relaxation of the anti-trust laws? Does Mr. Jackson refer to the encouragement given to the steel and petroleum companies to do the very things he now denounces so fervently?

Does Mr. Jackson refer to the signing by the President of the Robinson-Patman act and Mr. Roosevelt's failure to veto the Tydings - Miller price - fixing rider? Of none of these things does Mr. Jackson speak. Yet for four years through those measures Mr. Roosevelt and his Administration encouraged monopolistic practices.

Nor until recently has the Administration evidenced any desire whatever to enforce the antitrust laws. John Dickinson resigned as Assistant Attorney General because he believed he was wasting his time in going through futile motions under inadequately framed laws. What trusts have been dissolved under this Administration? Inadequate legislation is the alibi given, but what has been done to remedy the defects of the existing laws, unsatisfactory now to all parties concerned? Nothing.

Surely, Mr. Jackson remembers what happened to the thoughtful and important proposal laid before the President last April by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, who recommended the naming of a commission to study all aspects of monopoly and to formulate effective legislation to crush out monopolistic practices?

Given out with a fanfare by the President, that proposal was shelved. Nothing whatever was done about it. Indeed, there is evidence it was completely forgotten until the economic recession made it advisable for the New Deal to find an alibi for the failure of things to happen as they were planned.

In a sense, Mr. Jackson's speech before the American Political Science Association constituted one of the most damning indictments ever drawn against the New Deal. Mr. Jackson asserted that "the unvarnished truth is that the Government's recovery program has succeeded nowhere else so effectively as in restoring the profits of big business." How can that statement be reconciled with the reiterated claim that the objective of the New Deal was to improve the lot of the underprivileged one-third of the Nation?

"The only just criticism that can be made of the economic operations of the New Deal," asserted Mr. Jackson, "is that it set out a breakfast for the canary and let the cat steal it; it did not sufficiently guard recovery from the raids of the monopolist."

Now, Mr. Jackson is much too intelligent to believe that, rhetorical though his phrasing is. What he should have said is that the New Deal opened the canary cage and stuffed the cat into it.

All of which leads us to the suspicion that the New Deal is not nearly as interested in breaking up monopoly as it is in distracting public attention from the result of its own misdeeds and in finding a convenient whipping boy. We will bet dollars to doughnuts that once economic conditions right themselves and the 1938 elections are over, the New Deal will lose its newly found ardor for stamping out monopoly.

Slump to Touch Bottom in '38, Expert Warns

Next Year's Business Will Be Poor, Recovery Slow, Col. Ayres Says.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Dec. 29.—Col. Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland economist, predicted at the American Statistical Association's annual dinner tonight that the present decline in business would reach bottom during the first half of 1938 and that the year's business would be generally poor.

The recovery will be much slower than the decline, Ayres predicted, and "if we measure next year's conditions by the index of industrial production, which probably averages 109 for 1937, then I think production for 1938 will average within 6 per cent—one way or the other—of 90."

He estimated automobile production for 1938 would be 25 to 35 per cent lower than that of 1937, and that at the same time the index of wholesale prices would drop from 86 to 80.

Freight Traffic to Drop.

The volume of freight traffic on railroads will drop "at least 12 per cent, and no more than 24" during the year, he predicted. Stock market averages, he said, would drop during the next year to a level not far from averages for 1934 and 1935, which, he added, "was pretty low."

The economist predicted increases in three things: petroleum refining; bankruptcies and unemployment.

He expressed doubt there would be any increase in building operations over 1937, even if business generally picks up at the end of the year.

Foreign Business a Factor.

"The greatest question in this problem of recovery," Col. Ayres said, "is what happens to business in other countries. If business definitely declines abroad, then all these forecasts I have made can be considered optimistic."

He expressed fear that if business continued bad here it would automatically cause depressions abroad. Asked what this country could do about it, he replied it could "cure itself." He didn't dwell on that point, but observed:

"The key to the whole situation is the electric utilities. If electric companies resumed their old-time volume of construction it would restore a large volume of traffic to the railroads. If the railroads had traffic they would enter on a huge program of rehabilitation.

Industries Interdependent.

"Prosperity in utilities and railroads would insure prosperity in iron and steel, which otherwise will have lower production next year. If the utilities, railroads and iron and steel prosper, the automobile industry will be prosperous. And if all four of them were on that basis, then the general building recovery would be here."

One way to start the ball rolling, he said, would be for the Federal Government and the utilities to "sign a peace treaty." He expressed hope the recent meetings bteween President Roosevelt and various utility magnates would lead to such a treaty.

Anti-C.I.O. Workers Unite in Ford Plant

St. Louis, Dec. 29.—A trial examiner of the National Labor Relations Board heard testimony today concerning organizatio of the Liberty Legion of America, Inc., at the St. Louis assembly plant of the Ford Motor Co.

Assertedly acting without the knowledge of company officials, James Parr, secretary-treasurer, said he and six other Ford workers formed the Legion's St. Louis division in opposition to the C. I. O., which began picketing the plant November 24.

"We decided we needed a local organization of employes, and we did not want one run by outsiders," he explained.

Science Promises Luxuries Undreamed Of, Says Savant

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, Dec. 29.—Science promises the American people a finer kind of living than the wealthiest potentates of the past ever dreamed of, Dr. A. A. Potter, of Purdue University, today told the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Addressing a symposium on "Science and Society," Dr. Potter declared scientific discoveries and technological applications of power resources "should contribute more and more to a fuller and richer life."

The utilization of steam, electricity and gasoline already has given people of the United States comfort, freedom from drudgery, entertainment and the development of intellectual activities never found before in the history of the world except from the use of human slaves, he said.

Machine Slaves Serve Us.

Dr. Potter said the intellectual and scientific achievements of the Greek civilization were largely possible because for each free man of that time there were four slaves.

Today, he added, "we have the equivalent in mechanical power of more than 400 human slaves for each of the 30,000,000 families in this country," and full development of the Nation's power resources has not been approached.

The delegates were regaled with accounts of many odd and important discoveries, such as:

The goofiest animal is a two-headed snake. The two heads fight with each other for a morsel of food even though, either route, it goes into the same stomach. The two heads try to swallow each other, too, said Dr. Bert Cunningham, of Duke University, but sometimes, when in a good humor, they play with each other. Two-headed snakes, Dr. Cunningham added, are not rare.

Florida Is "Growing."

The State of Florida is "growing" new land along its Southern borders where red mangroves, nature's "real estate agents," are marching out to sea and leaving dry land behind them. The process was described by Dr. John H. Davis, of Southwestern College, Memphis. Old maps and recent airplane surveys, he said, show considerable land increase.

Convicts don't dream the way Freud's theories of suppressed wishes indicate they should. The dreams of 50 convicts, analyzed by Dr. L. M. Hanks, of the University of Illinois, showed only 20 were interested mainly in escape. Other convict dreams were about killing persons, falling, seeing old friends, going home, gaining paroles, getting pardons, smoking cigarettes, eating good food and rescuing female relatives.

Small boys who have ideas of becoming crack airplane pilots had better eat their spinach. Col. A. D. Tuttle, medical director of the United Air Lines, said the eye was the first organ affected by vitamin "A" deficiency. Lack of vitamin "A," he said, is the reason so much time must elapse before a person can see after entering a darkened theater.

Radio Appeal Intellectual.

To children the radio's greatest appeal is intellectual, according to an analysis of their reactions to programs, reported by John J. De Boer, of Chicago Normal College.

Youngsters pay great attention to announcers, to commercial announcements, to offers of gifts and to straight narration.

Dr. Robley D. Evans, physicist of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, reported that radium in the human body could be detected from five to ten years before its poisonous effects showed themselves in any way. He told the association that because no law in the United States prevented the manufacture and sale of radium preparations to laymen, there had been many unnecessary deaths from "quack" remedies. He said experiments had shown no medical value in radium swallowed or injected.

The unemployment committee also listed these four witnesses for its opening session January 4: John D. Biggers, director of the unemployment census; Isador Lubin, director of the Bureau of Labor Statistics; W. Frank Persons, director of the United States Employment Service, and Leon Henderson, Works Progress Administration economist.

For January 5 appearance the committee listed Secretary of Labor Perkins; Chairman Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board; Chairman Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Paul Raushenbosh, of the Wisconsin unemployment compensation division.

The appearance of Knudsen and Green was expected to be followed the following day by testimony from Robert E. Wood, president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Philip Murray, vice chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Knudsen Seeks Delay.

Detroit, Dec. 29 (AP).—William S. Knudsen, president of General Motors Corporation, today said he had asked a special Senate committee on employment to postpone his appearance before the committee from January 6 to January 28.

He said he was entirely willing to testify but had planned an extensive trip around the country, on company business, which would make it inconvenient for him to be in Washington until late in the month.

Newsprint Quiz May Be Shifted

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings and Robert H. Jackson, chief of the antitrust division, are considering transferring the Government's investigation of the newsprint industry to the Federal Trade Commission.

Cummings and Jackson both declined yesterday to discuss the question, but an informed official said the step was considered because Justice Department investigators had found members of the industry reluctant to answer questions.

The Trade Commission has power to subpena witnesses, which the Justice Department lacks. Furthermore, the commission can issue "cease and desist orders," whereas the department must go into court for official restraining orders.

For the Holidays . . . try CAPT. LAWRENCE'S Famous Old RUM PUNCH
Captain Ezra Lawrence (born in Nantucket in 1805) always made for holidays a rum punch so delicious and festive that it has been used in his family ever since. We got this recipe from his great-grandson:
"Dissolve ¾ pounds brown sugar, then add 1 quart lemon juice, 2 quarts Virgin Islands Rum, 1 quart Brandy, 2 quarts water, 1 wineglass peach Brandy, 1 tablespoon maple syrup. Let brew 2 hours." (Fills about 50 punch glasses.)
To make this recipe nowadays, you need Government House Rum, the rum from the Virgin Islands. A sound, honest rum, distilled directly from cane juice.

Japan Seeking Longer Terms On U. S. Cotton

Still Needs American Fiber Despite Successes in North China.

By the United Press.

Tokyo, Dec. 29.—Japan's North China adventure has not yet made her independent of American raw cotton, it was revealed tonight as the nation awaited the end of the eventful year of the bull, 1937.

The Japan Cotton Spinners Association is sounding out American producers with a plan for obtaining the product on a three-to-six-month payment plan. If that proves successful, the association may establish credit over longer terms and give up for the time being any idea of cutting down American cotton purchases.

The plan is being shaped to avoid conflict with Japan's strict import-control laws.

India, Ethiopia to Help.

Cotton may be obtained also from India under similar arrangement, but the association decided to start with American cotton and explore that situation first. Ethiopia also still holds possibilities, Japan having obtained some concessions from Italy.

Japan's purchases of American cotton in 1936 amounted to 1,564,111 bales. Imports from January to September, 1937, were 1,075,361 bales, an increase of 28,000 bales over the corresponding 1936 period.

For 1938—the year of the tiger—industrial concerns that have a capital exceeding 1,000,000,000 yen (about $300,000,000) are to take the lead in the industrialization effort in conquered Chinese territory.

China Plans Ready.

According to the magazine Industrialist, plans for the modernization of North China were begun by the South Manchuria Railway Co. late in 1935. They now are ready and operation can begin as soon as the present undeclared war ends.

In preparing for the task Japan has taken many drastic economic measures. Early this year the government imposed rigid exchange control to help regulate imported goods not necessary to the fighting forces or to industry engaged in making export goods.

As the year closed Japan's financial standing was pronounced good. A controlled economy prevailed for almost the entire year and no foreign loans were contracted.

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Munson Line trustees today filed suit in the Court of Claims against the United States for $2,226,260 for alleged damages caused by cancellation of foreign ocean mail contracts awarded under the merchant marine act of 1928.

Trustees Edward P. Farley and Morton L. Fearey said the suit was a "protective action" because the company had been unable to reach an out-of-court agreement with the Maritime Commission. They said they still hoped to reach a peaceful settlement.

Ex-Drug Clerk Here Will Face Ryan Charges

Ned Parks, Home, Served With Warrant for Non-Support of Son.

By the Associated Press.

Morganton, N. C., Dec. 29.—Ned A. Parks, 24, came home today and submitted to service of a warrant charging him with nonsupport of a son born to Martha Barkley six weeks before her marriage to Basil (Pat) Ryan, member of a wealthy New York family.

The warrant was served by Chief Deputy Sheriff R. F. Berry, and bond was set at $300 for Parks' appearance at Burke County Court next Monday.

In a statement issued from the office of his attorney, J. Ed Butler, Parks said he was innocent, and returned because he read of the charges in a newspaper.

He had been employed in a Washington (D. C.) drug store for the past several months.

Mrs. Ryan, who has remained in seclusion at her home since her marriage last November 4 to young Ryan, a grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan, could not be reached.

Ryan, who went to a Hickory hospital for treatment of what his physicians described as a gastro-intestinal upset the day after the marriage, said he remembered nothing of the marriage.

D. C.'s 'Thin Man' Bandit Identified By Five Victims

Five liquor store proprietors positively identified Hogan's picture, forwarded here yesterday by Cleveland authorities.

Hogan, who served more than five years in Lorton Reformatory and was released from that institution November 16, 1936, began to hold up liquor stores here shortly after his release. Twenty places were robbed of nearly $3,000 in the series which lasted nearly a year, Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson declared yesterday.

Detective Sergt. E. E. Thompson will leave for Cleveland this morning with one of the victims to have the body finally identified. Among those who yesterday identified Hogan's picture were Andrew Dawson, 1737 Connecticut avenue northwest; Rebecca Weinstein, 305 H street northwest; Nathan Himelfarb, 1641 Connecticut avenue, and Morton Brenner, 2519 M street northwest.

2 Dead, 10 Injured In Jersey City Fire

Jersey City, N. J., Dec. 29 (AP).—Fire, started when a spark ignited a Christmas tree in the city's largest hotel, took the lives of two persons today and endangered many others, some of whom jumped from smoke-filled rooms to fire nets below.

Ten persons, including Miss Helen Sullivan, 26, a telephone operator who remained at her switchboard to notify guests, were injured. Miss Sullivan's hair and clothing caught fire.

Police Chief Harry Walsh said tonight that an investigation showed there was a delay in turning in the alarm, and asserted employes of the hotel, the Plaza, attempted to fight the flames themselves before they called assistance.

Far East Control Held Japan's Goal

Japan will be satisfied with nothing less than complete domination of the Far East, B. A. Liu, principal of the China Training Institute, 30 miles from Nanking, said yesterday.

Liu is a graduate of Washington Missionary College, who has returned here after ten years for postgraduate work at the Seventh-Day Adventist Theological Seminary. He said:

"China has been feeling the effects of Japan's anxiety to rise to a position of world power through militarism in the past half-century, or since Japan began her aggression by seizing Korea in 1894 and 1895. All talk of world peace is so much emptiness, as there is no such thing as peace for people of this world."

22,000 Motorists Still Lack Plates

Approximately 22,000 District motorists have yet to obtain their 1938 automobile tags.

It will be impossible, said Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, to issue the remaining license plates before the deadline at midnight tomorrow. His office will close at 3:30 p. m. New Year's Eve.

Unless Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, extends the enforcement time limit on 1937 tags until 7 a. m. January 1—as he did last year—car owners will face arrest after midnight tomorrow. Under an act of Congress, the Commissioners are powerless to grant a longer extension.

Six thousand applicants stood in line yesterday to receive their new plates. An even greater number is expected today. Extra policemen have been assigned to control the last-minute crowds.

Mullen Denies 'Overcharging' Traffic Client

D. C. Attorney Cited With Bondsmen Takes Stand to Refute Charge.

John P. Mullen, Washington attorney accused of unethical dealings with an accused traffic offender, took the witness stand in police court yesterday to deny he "overcharged" his client while arranging bond and preparing a defense.

Mullen was cited jointly with Hyman Mendelson and Joseph P. McGee, bondsmen, and their cases are being aired before a general term of the four police court judges.

It was charged that Mullen misrepresented bond charges to Hans Otto Stasch, 26-year-old carpenter of Mechanicsville, Md., Stasch was acused of drunken driving, operating a car without a permit and failing to exhibit a registration card. The court set his bond at $500, but Mullen, it was contended, told him it was $800.

Denies Charge.

"I never said a word about the bond," Mullen declared yesterday. "I might have told him the usual bond in cases of this type was $300 and I saved him $300 by having it lowered—but I didn't tell him it was $800."

Earlier, Stasch had testified Mullen asked him for $100 to pay for posting the bond. This Mullen also denied, explaining he received a check for $75 from Stasch to cover the $25 bond fee and his retainer fee.

The accused man, who subsequently was fined $150 and jailed in default—said he did not ask Mullen to represent him and did'nt know the lawyer when the latter approached him in the prisoners' dock at Police Court.

Summoned by Officer.

Mullen, on the other hand, said he was summoned to talk to Stasch by a "lady probation officer." Another prisoner, Mullen said he was told, had given Stasch his name.

Charges against Mullen and the bondsmen were filed after a lengthy investigation by a special committee of the District Bar Association appointed by the Police Court judges.

$49,662 More Given To Charity Chest

Additional gifts of $49,662.85 have been given to the Community Chest since close of the campaign November 30, Herbert L. Willett, jr., chairman, announced yesterday.

Audited figures show that the total received to date has risen to $1,832,141.43, or 91.41 per cent of the goal.

Claude E. Hamilton, jr., eneral counsel and Chest unit chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, reported $1,242.81 additional contributions. This added to previous gifts of $10,577.50 represents 101.32 per cent of the corporation's quota.

In commenting on the new gifts, Willett pointed out that the original quota of $2,059,000 was based on th minimum needs o. Chest agencies and that each dollar under it means fewer needy people can be helped.

Ex-Wall St. Broker Dead in Sing Sing

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 29 (AP).—Harold Russell Ryder, 42, former Wall Street broker, once called "the Little Boy Blue of Broadway," died suddenly of heart disease today in Sing Sing Prison, where he was sent 15 days ago on a grand larceny conviction.

Ryder was a spectacular operator and made extravagant promises to those who entrusted money to him. When he was on trial for second-degree larceny, witnesses accused him of taking hundreds of thousands of dollars from them.

Don Marquis, Famed Satirist, Dies at 58 After Long Illness

Pioneer Columnist Had Cheerful Christmas Before End Came.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—Don Marquis, 58, pioneer newspaper columnist whose satire won him wide fame in the literary and theatrical worlds, died at his home early today after a long illness.

Marquis, described by his close friend, Christopher Morley, as "the most philosophical humorist in this country," had been ill since 1936, when he suffered the first of a series of strokes which sapped his strength and finances.

With him at the end were his two sisters, the Misses Bernice and Neva Marquis, who had attended him almost constantly in his suburban home at Forest Hills, Long Island.

Despite the paralysis which gripped him, Marquis was said by his sister, Bernice, to have spent "a wonderful day" on Christmas.

"He enjoyed his dinner and his greeting cards and his telegrams so much," she said. "He seemed to be buoyed up by the spirit of Christmas."

The following day, Sunday, he was able to receive a few friends, but last night he turned worse, rallying only once before falling into his last sleep.

Celebrated as the creator of "The Old Soak," a bibulous character which first came to life in the "Sun Dial" column of the New York Sun and later amused thousands of theatergoers, Marquis became one of the most picturesque personalities that ever pounded a typewriter.

Marquis belonged to the pioneer era of newspaper columnists made famous by Franklin P. Adams (F. P. A.), O. O. McIntyre, Walt Mason and Bert Leston Tayler of the Chicago Tribune's "Lone-o'-Type or Two."

Baptized Robert Perry Marquis, he was born on July 29, 1878, at Walnut, Bureau County, Ill., and after leaving the district school he worked as a section hand on the C. B. & Q. Railroad—"the hardest work," he said, "I ever did in my life."

Then, at 18, he began to contribute bits of gusty verse to the Walnut Mail and Express which lampooned political officeholders and stirred the community to hearty laughter. It was a Democratic paper, and at the urgent request of the entire Republican community, the rollickingly disturbing young man named Marquis was tempted to leave town for a job in the Census Bureau at Washington.

DON MARQUIS.

In Washington, a born newspaperman, he soon drifted into a job as a reporter for the Washington Times. Thence to Atlanta, Ga., where he was sent by his paper and where he met Joel Chandler Harris, who was editing the Uncle Remus Magazine. Marquis became Harris' assistant editor, but New York soon called him and he joined the New York Sun at about the same time Irvin S. Cobb started a similar rise to fame as a "Sun man."

Besides the Old Soak and Archy the Cockroach, who wrote on a typewriter at night when Marquis was away, entirely in lower case letters because he couldn't use the shift key, Marquis' characters also included Mehitable, the alley cat, who was frankly disreputable; Capt. Peter Fitzurse, the unconquered raconteur; Fothergill Finch, of the beautiful gesture, and the fair Hermione and her Little Group of Serious Thinkers.

Leaving the Sun, Marquis went to the New York Tribune to conduct a column called "The Lantern" for two years until 1922, when he retired from active newspaper work to become a playwright, a contributor to magazines and a writer of books.

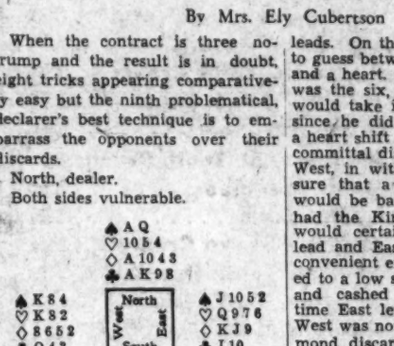
In recent years he contributed to the editorial pages of newspapers and to smart magazines. He suffered a stroke in 1936 and was partly paralyzed for a while. To the end, his sense of humor never failed.

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Cubertson

When the contract is three no-trump and the result is in doubt, eight tricks appearing comparatively easy but the ninth problematical, declarer's best technique is to embarrass the opponents over their discards.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 N T	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T	Pass
Pass	Pass

West, having honors in the three unbid suits, decided that the best protective opening was the deuce of diamonds. Dummy ducked, and East made the correct play of the nine-spot—had he put up the King, declarer's problem would have been easily resolved. South won the first trick with the diamond Queen, and cleared the club suit in three leads. On the third round East had to guess between discarding a spade and a heart. Since his lowest heart was the six, he was afraid partner would take it as a "come on," and since he did not particularly wish a heart shift he decided on the non-committal discard of the spade five. West, in with the club Queen, felt sure that a diamond continuation would be bad for his side. If East had the King and Jack, declarer would certainly duck the second lead and East would not have any convenient exit. Hence, West shifted to a low spade. Declarer finessed and cashed the good club. This time East let go the heart six and West was now up against it. A diamond discard would be much too informatory; it would encourage declarer to lead the Ace and another diamond. A spade discard was unthinkable, since West could not know where the Jack was. Hence, West was practically forced to let go a low heart. Declarer now had an almost sure count on West's hand—four diamonds, three clubs, probably three spades, and three hearts. With this count declarer was now able to make a play that could not have worked before the heart discard came from West, namely, to lead the ten of hearts from dummy. Had this play been made earlier, East certainly would have covered, and West's King-8 would have remained over declarer's Jack-3.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Newsreel 'Specials' of Panay Sinking Are Awaited On Screens of the Capital's Picture Houses Today

Reels Ranging From 1,000 to 3,000 Feet in Length Are on Their Way to Washington to Show "Inside" of Bombing; Guild Subscription Tickets Mailed; Film Society's Next Bill Jan. 12; Theater Notes.

BELL.

WASHINGTON theatergoers still are eagerly awaiting the arrival in the Capital of the comprehensive newsreel "specials" of the sinking of the U. S. gunboat Panay in the Yangtze River in China. As this is written late Wednesday afternoon, none of the prints as yet has reached town. Norman Alley, the Universal newsreel cameraman, who filmed the three reels to be presented at RKO-Keith's Theater as a special addition to the regular bill as soon as the canned celluloid arrives, was grounded in Cheyenne, Wyo., Tuesday night and was unable to leave for New York by plane until 6:15 o'clock yesterday morning. At 4:30 p. m., Wednesday, he has not been set down in Manhattan. As soon as the Gotham theaters have been serviced, Washington will be dispatched the first prints of this item of international concern, advance glimpses of which already have been revealed on the news pages of The Post.

The Loew interests call up, at approximately the same hour, to say that their home office assurances are that the Fox Movietone News and "Events of the Day" prints will be on view in all three of the Loew theaters—Capitol, Palace and Columbia—at the first scheduled performance today.

Paramount News, servicing the Earle and Metropolitan theaters of the Warner Brothers Circuit, are expected to run a neck-and-neck race with the others and have their films before the public at least as soon as any others are shown.

At the moment, that is the best that a harried drama desk can do toward assuaging public curiosity and anxiety as to the "inside story" of an international incident of profound importance. I am able to recall nothing during some 30-odd years of screen-gazing that has occasioned so many telephone calls or such obvious public impatience.

It is a foregone conclusion that there will be box-office lines blocks long at every theater in town when the eye-witness scenes of the bombing finally reach the local screens.

These, incidentally, are no ordinary newsreel "clips" that the Capital is anticipating with such bated breath. To the best of this column's knowledge, no pictorial news outlet has filmed less than 1,000 feet of the tragic event and Norman Alley's gelatine record of the unprovoked attack runs to three full reels—a longer footage than most comedies receive and virtually a short feature in itself. Mr. Alley's "still" shots are the ones that are being reproduced in this journal, via Wirephoto, as rapidly as they are received.

For the record, it should be set down that the 5,500 and more subscribers to the season of six plays fostered by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington should have received their tickets to the fifth subscription play of the current year these past two days. The play, of course, will be Eddie Dowling's production of "Shadow and Substance," the Abbey Theater's Dublin hit, scheduled to open in the National Theater next Monday night.

Those who have not received their tickets for "Shadow and Substance" are urged to communicate that fact at once to the local offices in the National Theater Building, which may be reached by calling District 2433 between the hours of 12 noon and 5 p. m., daily.

• • • •

Word filters through that the Film Society of Washington's showing of Joris Iven's "The Spanish Earth" and J. B. Priestley's "We Live in Two Worlds," definitely is scheduled for the Rialto Theater at 8:30 p. m., on Wednesday, January 12. The program, third of the new group's series of ten this season, originally was announced for either January 5 or 12. This will mark the society's first presentation of contemporary films, the first two evenings having been devoted to the resurrection of screen plays produced prior to 1925 and dating back as far as 1903. And were they funny!

The old-timers in "show business" have crawled out of their hibernation to visit Washington over the holiday season.

Last week who should barge into the tesselated elegance of the drayma department but Jim Peede, heralding the many virtues—one hopes—of "Shadow and Substance." Our old friend, "take care of yourself, Jim," formerly was general manager for Richard Walton Tully, producer of "The Bird of Paradise" and later a picture-maker, releasing his product through First National. It was in "The Bird of Paradise" that Mr. Tully set in motion the wave of Hawaiian music that shortly afterward inundated the American theater by making Toots Paka and Her Hawaiian Troubadours an important item in his stage presentation of the volcanic epic of the Polynesians, in which Lenore Ulric was starred.

Hot on Jim's heels arrived Arthur Levy, once a newspaper man himself, on the old New York World, who has many pleasant things to say concerning Constance Cummings and her second Washington adventure of the current season in "If I Were You," a new comedy by Paul Hervey Fox and Benn Levy, her husband in private life and no relation of Arthur's. After lunching with him today, the gods being propitious, this typewriter may have something more to say concerning Mr. Levy and his current preoccupations.

So Roland Robbins calls up from the Trans-Lux Theater at 5:50 p. m., to say, as an addendum to what already has been written here relative to the burning topic, that his latest assurances are that 1,000 feet of Fox Movietone News shots of the Panay sinking will be on view in his playhouse this morning at the first show. The Movietone reel was photographed by Eric Mayell, who also was present on the spot with his camera, as Arthur De Titta previously had made known to this space.

Just to add a few complications to an already hectic New Year's week, with its advanced Sunday deadlines and this and that, the local impresarios are piling up previews thicker than that Yuletide London fog you have been reading about.

We were unfortunately prevented from taking an advance gander at "Tovarich," in the Warner projection room yesterday afternoon, and may suffer a similar disappointment today when the Loew executives are proffering the drama desks a squint at Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane," to be presented on New Year's Eve at the Palace a week or so ahead of its normal booking at that house as the successor to "Rosalie," the current feature, costarring Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell. If we see it, we'll tell you later—which probably is one of your major New Year fears.

• • • •

George Vivian and Dorothy Martin, directors of the National Academy of Stage training, returned to Washington yesterday after a brief Yuletide vacation to their respective homes in New York. They now are all tuned up, as the saying goes, to plunge into another ten weeks of instructional activity, beginning Monday, when the new term of the Cochran academy opens to point a new roster of aspiring young Thespians toward Broadway and everlasting renown behind the footlights.

My New Year's cards ought to reach you not later than Memorial Day, if the Honorable Jim Farley's gray-clad hosts don't fall down on the job and make me appear to be left at The Post!

British Star Assumes New Role

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 29.—Settin' Around (Universal): Henry Koster is a name that every theatergoer should know, for it is becoming one of Hollywood's best guarantees of picture excellence. The pictures that he directs have sparkle. He is the ace director of Universal—and to his skill and understanding much of Deanna Durbin's success can be attributed.

• • • •

His success story follows Hollywood's time-honored "Cinderella" theme. Two years ago, as a brand new importation from Europe he could not speak a word of English. His salary—in spite of the fact that he had directed several outstanding European hits—was only $250 a week. Universal shunted him about from pillar to post and finally assigned him to direct a "Class B" production entitled "Three Smart Girls." No one expected it to be a hit—and no one considered its child star, Deanna Durbin, a very likely prospect for top ranking. Koster made that "Class B" production one of the great pictures of the year. His wizardry made her second film, "One Hundred Men and A Girl," even a greater hit.

• • • •

Koster is now one of Hollywood's highest-salaried directors. Every studio in town would like to own his contract—and I honestly believe that Universal would refuse to trade this 33-year-old German genius for the most famous director of them all.

• • • •

Spent an hour on the "Mad About Music" set—and was impressed by the complete lack of kowtowing to the picture's star, Miss Deanna Durbin. Everyone, from director down to the lowliest laborer, treats her with the easy familiarity which they would accord to the little girl next door. And that attitude is maintained by mandate of the studio's boss, Charles Rogers, who is determined that Deanna shall be one child in screen history who will not be spoiled by stardom. The production crew on this picture is the same that worked on her first and her second films, for Rogers believes that people who know her well are less apt to regard her with awe and shower her with flattery. The only new member of the company is a hairdresser and I am told that she drew a sizzling reprimand from Producer Joseph Pasternack because she was too flattering when being introduced to the star! Mr. Charles Rogers is a clever man.

• • • •

As proof that Deanna is still wholly unspoiled, consider this incident, told me today by one of the crew. In order to reach the studio cafe which, at Universal, is outside the main gates, Deanna had been running the gantlet of the autograph hunters. For 15 minutes, every day, she was mauled and mobbed by too enthusiastic fans. Finally one of the studio executives, noting her distress, gave her a key to the back entrance of the cafe, which enabled her to enter unobserved. A few weeks later, however, she was again trying to fight her way through the sight-seeing mob. Asked why she didn't use the private door, she answered, "I lost the key—and I didn't dare ask for another one!"

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 29.

JACK BUCHANAN, the star, now appearing in "Between the Devil," was held up by two gunmen backstage at the Majestic Theater Friday night. He refused to report it to the police, fearing that the public would believe it was a publicity stunt . . . After his performance, two armed men had obtained admission to Jack's dressing room and directed, "Come on, you. Fork over." They got his wallet but didn't leave . . . "Won't you have a drink?" Buchanan proffered . . . They accepted—and each gulped a water glassful of Scotch . . . "I think you'd better leave now." Buchanan told them . . . And so the duo staggered out—drunk!

• • • •

WHENEVER A VISITOR comes to see Jock Whitney at his Selznick-International offices here, Whitney presents a richly engraved card reading: "We don't know who the hell's gonna play Scarlett O'Hara." . . . James McKinley Bryant, who slugged Grace Moore's escort recently, is leaving for the coast tonight . . . Jack Farley, brother of the Postmaster General, forgot to mail his Christmas cards . . . John Barrymore confided that he'll return to the drama because so many of the theater critics never have had the opportunity of seeing him perform.

• • • •

MOSS HART had himself a helluva time Christmas Eve. He stepped into the first-act finale of "I'd Rather Be Right" and took a bow with the cast, went over to "You Can't Take It With You" and joined that cast in taking bows at the curtain . . . Hart then visited the George S. Kaufmans, where he helped trim the Christmas tree. When Ann Kaufman insisted upon watching the proceedings, Moss told the young girl: "After parents trim the tree, the children mustn't see it until morning. It's supposed to be a big surprise. My father never let us kids see the tree until the next morning." . . . "That must've been quite a stunt," Mr. Kaufman interrupted, "with all of you in that one room."

• • • •

TED HEALY'S DEATH disrupted M.-G.-M.'s plans to form a comedy trio of Healy, Buddy Ebsen and Buster Keaton. Keaton will direct short subjects now . . . Phyllis Haver still is confined to her bed, nursing a fractured ankle sustained at the Army-Navy game . . . Ed Foley, WPA's general counsel, now has the job of rectifying Morgenthau's relations with Capitol Hill . . . Sam Goldwyn spurned the suggestion that he film an American version of "Mayerling." Sam explained: "In the first place it has an unhappy ending—and besides, if it was a good idea, some one would have done it long ago."

• • • •

VIOLET HEMING attended a pre-Christmas party with some London friends. "Standing right behind you, Violet," some one whispered, "is Lady Peel." . . . Miss Heming, who has known Beatrice Lillie for many years, bared her ears, shrieked, "Puh-leeze, puh-leeze," swept one curved finger from side to side, leaped upward—in the customary imitation of Bea—and then turned to embrace Lady Peel . . . But it wasn't Beatrice Lillie, who had married Sir Robert Peel. It was the venerable Lady Peel—wife of Lord Peel.

• • • •

ERSKINE GWYNNE, the socialite, went to a swanky hotel Christmas Eve and was attended by a valet—to whom he presented a bottle of brandy as a present. "You'll have to take this," Gwynne explained, "because I'm not too wealthy at the moment. Somebody gave me this bottle." . . . The valet agreed to accept it, on condition that Gwynne have the first drink with him. "I can't," Erskine explained, "because I've got to shave, and I might cut myself if I drink." . . . "Don't worry," the valet assured. "I used to be a barber. I'll shave you." . . . And so they drank it up, and the valet shaved him. It will be weeks before the scars heal.

Wedding Imminent Between Players

Climaxing a whirlwind courtship, Jimmy Dunn, popular screen leading man, and Frances Gifford, youthful brunette beauty now playing in "Night Spot," will be married on New Year's Eve—the exact time and place to be announced later.

Abbey Theater Hit Will Lead New Playbills

Sir Cedric Hardwicke Is Star of National Play; Other New Programs.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke will be presented by Eddie Dowling in "Shadow and Substance," a finely fashioned play by Paul V. Carroll, in the National Theater for the week beginning next Monday night. This will be the fifth subscription play in the season of six offered by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington. Sir Cedric is no stranger to American audiences, having appeared on both stage and screen in this country for many seasons past. "Shadow and Substance" was first produced by the Abbey Theater Irish Players in Dublin—the company now enjoying a sensationally successful run on Broadway with a later appearance in Washington on the National's booking sheets. The cast supporting the star is led by Sara Allgood, one of the most illustrious of the Abbey Theater Players, and Julie Haydon, who played the feminine lead with Noel Coward in "The Scoundrel," the film play by Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur. Others in the cast include Harry Sothern, Valerie Cossart, Lloyd Gough, Gerald Buckley, Leonard Doyle, John Kearney and Almira Sessions, Washington actress. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Claudette Colbert and Charles Boyer are the pictured co-stars in the screen version of "Tovarich," to be seen as chief feature of the photoplay bill at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The play was presented in its original form on the stage of the National Theater earlier in the season with Marta Abba and Rudolf Forster in the principal roles. The story is a highly amusing one of Russian emigres in Paris, following the revolution. Anita Louise, Melville Cooper, Isabel Jeans and Morris Carnovsky are prominent among the supporting players. On the stage, the New Year's bill will be headlined by Bert Frohman, well known to the National Capital as a singing master of ceremonies of the first rank. His revue will utilize the services of such eminent artists as Nick Long, jr., dancer; Nadine Gae, "princess of the dance;" Joe and Pete Michon, Nina Allen and the Eight Silvertones and the 16 Gae Foster Girls.

RKO-Keith's will break out its new screen attraction tomorrow evening at 6 p. m. It will be "A Damsel in Distress," the new starring vehicle for Fred Astaire, in which he is supported by a strong cast, led by George Burns and Gracie Allen, Joan Fontaine, Reginald Gardiner, Ray Noble and his orchestra and Constance Collier. The story was written by P. G. Wodehouse and boasts a musical setting by the late George Gershwin, foremost of America's modern composers. The bill, as usual, will be augmented by a cosiderable list of short-reel subjects.

"Rosalie," one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most pretentious musical productions, costarring Nelson Eddy and Eleanor Powell, supported by Frank Morgan, Edna May Oliver, Iona Massey, Ray Bolger and a host of others, not omitting Reginald Owen, will be continued for a second week as foremost attraction on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. The feature of the New Year's Eve midnight performance will be a preview of Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane," which will not be shown again until it succeeds "Rosalie" as the Palace's major attraction.

At the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater, "Hold 'em Navy" will be presented as chief feature of the bill through today. Tomorrow it will be succeeded by a special production of the first rank, the title of which, as yet, has not been disclosed.

Frederick March and Carole Lombard, supported by Walter Connolly, Charles Winninger and others of note, will continue their downtown popularity in "Nothing Sacred," at the Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. This satirical comedy-drama of the "newspaper game" was written by Ben Hecht and embodies much that is pungently humorous and dramatically effective. The bill will be augmented by the usual short subjects and "Events of the Day," including views of the sinking of the U. S. S. Panay on the Yangtze River in China.

The sinking of the U. S. Gunboat Panay will comprise the outstanding newsreel feature of the new screen bill opening at the Trans-Lux Theater tomorrow. Another featured film will star Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, the fabulous team of ventriloquists. Xavier Cugat and his orchestra will be presented in a unique "short," bearing the title of "Let's Go Latin."

Two Government-made films will be presented on next week's bill at the Little Theater, beginning Sunday. A revival of "The Plow That Broke the Plains" will be combined with Pare Lorentz' later picture of "The River," which will enter its fourth week at the Little on Sunday, to supplement anotner revival of "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," costarring William Powell and Jean Arthur.

At the Gayety Theater next week, beginning with the customary matinee performance on Sunday, a new burlesque attraction will be offered, with Valerie Parks the featured feminine member of the cast. The principal comic roles will be in the capable hands of Bob Ferguson and Manny King.

Edward G. Robinson will be the picture star on the screen at Lowe's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow in "The Last Gangster," one of the most tensely exciting dramas of the mobsters ever produced. He is supported by an exceptionally able cast, featuring a new leading woman in the person of Rose Stradner, a competent and charming actress.

Allotment of HOLC funds to GHA was defended as providing the agency "with facilities for the physical examination of prospective employes and as a progressive employer to provide itself with more adequate services from those already in its employ, believing that the cost of sickness was a serious problem . . . that through . . . this plan it would be possible to cut down" on sick leaves.

Barbara Stanwyck Says Mate Hit Her

Los Angeles, Dec. 29 (AP).—Barbara Stanwyck, actress, testified today that her former husband, Frank Fay, punched her jaw because she went to a burlesque show.

She said she fell over a chair after Fay hit her with his fist.

Score Seized in Realty Swindle Preying on Poor Immigrants

Raids Follow Indictment of 51 in $2,000,000 Sale of Wasteland on Long Island; Foreign Papers Accused of Picturing Bonanza.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—In a series of widespread arrests, detectives today seized more than a score of suspects in an alleged $2,000,000 Long Island real estate swindle preying on struggling immigrants in the mill towns of New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

"Victims were high-pressured into a state bordering upon hysteria," Attorney General John J. Bennett said.

One suspect committed suicide in a Passaic, N. J., hotel in the course of the eight-month investigation conducted by Bennett.

One of the $1,500 alleged victims, a humble immigrant, fleeced of his life savings of $2,500 which he invested in the scheme, now is in an insane asylum.

The arrests followed indictments by the New York County grand jury of 51 defendants, including several foreign language newspaper publishers, editors and a Hungarian count, all charging grand larceny and conspiracy.

Striking in pre-dawn raids, detectives first arrested Mrs. Ethel Smolens, 40-year-old blonde real estate operator, of Deer Park, Long Island. The Deer Park vicinity formed the "backdrop" of the scheme—a site depicted to prospects as a beautiful "model community."

"Foreign language newspapers operated by leaders in Slovak-American life hailed this community as a piece of the homeland in America where native customs and costumes would be revived, where the native language would be used, where mill workers and tenement dwellers would find an ideal community life with their families, and where every one would be given employment," Bennett said.

"The prospects were shown architects' drawings of a gun factory, cork plant, glass factory, weaving mill and other industrial plants to be erected. They were promised that New York harbor would be moved close to this development and that transatlantic ships would berth in a bay to be carved out right near the community—despite the fact that the real estate project was several miles from water."

The grand jury, after an investigation, asserted the 11,000 lots sold at high prices were actually located in scrub-oak wasteland—a lonely, almost desolate region.

7 Cuban Fliers Die As 3 Planes Crash In Midair in Andes

By the United Press.

Cali, Colombia, Dec. 29.—Seven persons were killed today when three Cuban "good will" planes, buffeted by air currents in a violent Andean storm, collided and crashed in flames in a mountainous region 12 miles west of Cali.

The planes were in a squadron of four making an air cruise of Latin-American capitals in behalf of the Columbus Memorial Lighthouse proposed for erection in the Harbor of Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic. The fourth machine, piloted by Maj. Frank Felix Miranda, of the Dominican army, landed safely at Paitilla Field, Panama.

According to witnesses, the planes appeared to interlock momentarily, burst into flames and then crashed separately.

Gullion to Change Army Trial System

Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, new judge advocate general of the Army, has reorganized his office, the War Department announced yesterday.

Col. Edwin C. McNeil and Col. Allen M. Burdett have been named assistants to the judge advocate general, and Maj. Robert W. Brown has been appointed executive officer.

Gen. Gullion has also ordered a study of means for speeding up military justice, reducing the number of Army courts-martial for petty offenses, and for mitigating punishment of certain lesser infractions of military discipline.

The Ludlow Irresolution.

Some seemingly conscience-stricken members of the bloc whose signatures forced the Ludlow resolution out of committee, have issued a statement denying that their action has "any bearing whatever on our present national policy."

The war referendum amendment, they point out, would not come into force until it has been approved by two-thirds of both Houses of Congress and then by three-fourths of the States. That could not happen, at the earliest, before 1940. The specious conclusion is that the measure therefore cannot embarrass the Administration now.

The unrealistic nature of this defense is on a par with the unrealism of the Ludlow proposal itself. In effect it asserts that foreign powers in their dealings with the Administration will pay no immediate attention to this evidence that American public opinion opposes any policy calculated to defend even the most elemental American rights abroad.

Unfortunately that pleasant assumption is utterly false. The Ludlow resolution, until flatly repudiated by Congress, will influence aggressor nations to believe that any strong stand by the United States in any matter affecting American lives and property abroad is subject to repudiation at home. A favorable vote on the Ludlow resolution would be tantamount to giving the aggressors carte blanche to go ahead, in South America, the Caribbean, the Far East, or whatever their long-range plans may indicate. All that these aggressors want to know is the present sentiment of the American Congress. They should worry as to the eventual approval or repudiation of the proposed amendment by the States.

This is the real significance and the very great danger in the emergency of the Ludlow plan at this time. And the danger will remain as long as there is even a slight possibility that Congress will vote favorably on a measure which could not be more pleasing to the aggressive dictatorships if it had been deliberately designed to encourage them.

That is why everyone should be glad that the Ludlow resolution is to be brought to a vote on January 10. Until disposed of it will hang like a sword of Damocles over any constructive foreign policy and will be a constant incitement to aggressors to treat the United States as an irresponsible cipher in the effort to preserve peace.

The resolution deserves and demands complete and final repudiation, the sooner the better. And those, if any, who vote for it may be sure that in the long run their constituents will hold them responsible for the consequences of a measure all the more calculated to encourage war because dishonestly camouflaged as a peace resolution.

The Friedsam Award.

This year's award of the Friedsam gold medal to Edward Bruce, chief of the Treasury Department's section of painting and sculpture, was particularly happy. Bestowed for "outstanding achievement in promoting the fine and decorative arts," the honor has properly been given to the man responsible for the murals and statuary found not only in the newer Federal buildings in Washington but in hundreds of postoffices and courthouses throughout the country.

With characteristic modesty Mr. Bruce has declared that credit for the bright embellishments to otherwise heavy public buildings should go to the President, who authorized them in the first instance. This gracious gesture, however, will not distract attention from the fact that Mr. Bruce originally conceived the plan to enlist the Nation's best artistic talent to decorate its offices and that he has administered the program from the beginning.

His administration has been remarkable for its efficency and integrity as well as its humanity and social purpose. Not a whisper of graft or preferment has ever been raised against it. Juries judging the competitions by which most of the Federal commissions have been awarded have been of the highest competence and have given unsparingly of their time and energy. Highly discriminating decisions have been the result, yielding creations that would certainly have pleased the critical tastes of Michael Friedsam, whose collection of primitives are the boast of the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

A Grim Object Lesson.

The roots of the present very serious general strike in Paris trace fundamentally to the continuous deficit financing in which France has for years indulged, and more immediately to the hasty wages and hours legislation which was rushed through in the summer of 1936.

The sharp price increases and further currency devaluation which followed the rapid establishment of an arbitrary 40-hour week have more than wiped out the nominal monetary gains achieved by French labor. In Paris, for instance, a 12 per cent wage advance was offset, within a year after its establishment, by a 28 per cent increase in living costs.

The simple fact is that under the Blum government the workingman in France was promised far more than the economy of the country was able to fulfill. He was promised that higher wages would coincide with shorter working hours, although increased production was the only way in which the national income, and labor's share thereof, could possibly be augmented. For a time the inevitable outcome was postponed by piling up an ever-greater volume of governmental indebtedness. But this led only to a flight of capital and subsequent devaluation which pushed prices still higher.

Disillusionment increases in direct proportion to the magnitude of unfulfilled expectations. French labor has grown increasingly sullen and angry as its wages have lagged behind rising living costs. Tempers have not improved as under Premier Chautemps exception after exception has been made in the operation of the 40-hour week, in a desperate effort to make up the production declines and provide revenue which would permit a balanced budget and currency stability.

On top of this ugly situation there has been a sedulous campaign of denunciation against the "200 families" popularly assumed to dominate French industry and banking, and to be somehow responsible for higher living costs. Whatever the measure of truth in the allegation it has unquestionably been exploited to distract the attention of millions of Frenchmen from the real trouble, which is deficit financing, and to establish the oversimplified idea that a few wealthy plutocrats are really responsible for the economic difficulties of France.

A situation of this character is manna to the Communists. And that they have been instrumental in launching the present strike is obvious. There is no possibility that it can do anything but intensify the dangers in the present situation. But that objective, of course, is exactly what the Communists are after.

Americans will be well-advised to watch this French outburst very closely. In spite of the great differences between the two countries the path on which France has gone downhill is in many ways similar to the path which we are now descending. Indeed the parallelism, right down to utilization of sit-down strikes as a part of Communist technique, is in many cases remarkable.

Not the least striking instance of parallelism is found in the present attack of Mr. Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, on "America's 60 families" which, it would seem, are now to be held primarily responsible for all the consequences of the blunders, contradictions and administrative bunglings of the New Deal. This is an exact counterpart of the way in which the sins of "200 families" in France were trotted out by officials of the Blum government to conceal the steady deterioration of government finance from public attention.

The red herring is an old device and Mr. Jackson is not the first to use it. But, when combined with inflammatory demagogy, it may be a trick with very serious consequences. If another French revolution should send everyone of the "200 families" in France to the guillotine, not one of the fundamental problems now confronting that country would be solved thereby.

Before he does more damage than must already be credited to his account Mr. Jackson would do well to reflect on that fact, and to make use of that reflection in some careful editing of his forthcoming speeches.

Don Marquis.

Washington will want to claim him because he found his first newspaper job here; more properly, he was New York's son or, better still, a gift to the entire country. Don Marquis made them all chortle.

There was, to begin with, "The Old Soak"—Clem Hawley, who never cottoned up to "Looey Cat-Horse" or any of the rest of the pother raised about Europe. Then there was Fothergill Finch of the Beautiful Gesture and the Fair Hermione and Her Little Group of Serious Thinkers. And, finally, there was archy the cockroach and mehitabel the cat of the refreshingly lower-case manners.

Don Marquis was no two-dimensional artist. He dealt in foibles and frankness that gave his characters a reality rarely achieved in cold letterprint—fact confirmed by the success granted "The Old Soak" when he was put on the stage. And they were more than funny; being creations of a man who could gaily ignore a long paralysis, they were hard-hitting foes of all softness and foppery.

Rearmament.

In planning to ask Congress to authorize the enlargement of the forthcoming naval building program beyond originally contemplated limits, President Roosevelt shows how seriously disturbed he is by the threatening international situation.

He is not the only statesman at the helm in democratic nations to feel that way. During the past few years even the most ardently peace-loving lands have felt compelled to embark on large-scale programs of rearmament. With the ideal of collective security in eclipse, at least for the time being, every nation has found it necessary to build up its defenses. Great Britain, for instance, is planning to spend a total of $7,500,000,000 during a five-year period in order to make herself secure. Within the limits of their respective resources the democracies are following suit.

The spread of world chaos contrasts vividly with the hopeful but naive belief that we can, somehow, isolate ourselves from the dangers that threaten. Such wishful thinking has found concrete manifestation in successive neutrality laws and, lately, in the clamor for the Ludlow resolution. But the illusion has not destroyed the reality. Coincident with agitation for mandatory neutrality acts, for plebiscites on war, for willing ourselves out of the world in which we live, our defense budget has leaped upward. And seemingly it is likely to rise still further.

In his letter to Representative Taylor, chairman of the House sub-committee on naval appropriations, the President, voicing his "growing concern" over world events, declares that he has no "specific nation" or "any specific threat against the United States" in mind. The inference to be drawn is that he is worried by the general threat embodied in the growing disregard of treaty obligations.

These actual or potential aggressors have already achieved a common front. They stand by each other when any one of them flouts its pledges and goes on the warpath. The peace-loving nations, however, show no unity of action. There is no common front in behalf of their common interests. Each of them, therefore, is faced by the prospect of having unaided to resist possible attack, not by one aggressor alone but by an aggressor aided or abetted by very powerful allies.

The logic of this disturbing situation is clear. By pooling their efforts to preserve peace in the world, the peaceful nations would not be compelled individually to bear so back-breaking a burden as is now the case. That holds for the United States as it holds for every other nation that hates war and wants to see it averted. But as long as these countries refuse to co-ordinate their policies, their rearmament budgets are bound, under present circumstances, to expand.

It is certainly no accidental coincidence that the clamor of the isolationists has gone hand in hand with steadily increased expenditures for our armed forces. By inhibiting constructive co-operative action for peace many of our pacifists, ironically enough, play directly into the hands of our most ardent preparedness advocates.

Wisecrackers And Cheese.

A wit of old complained that people laughed uproariously at what they thought his joke when at the dinner table he asked a neighbor to pass the mustard. A lesser wit would have tried to exploit the mistake, for many a piece of cheese thinks itself a wisecracker. It was so yesterday, is so today, will be so tomorrow.

But if the minor wisecracker happens to be young in spirit, healthy, wholesome and good to look at, it may readily be that her banalities take on an epigrammatic atmosphere even when lacking in material content.

So one may forgive Lady Nancy Astor, member of the British Parliament and a recent visitor to her old home in Virginia, when she says, "Any reform you get here you manage in spite of the newspapers, not because of them." The declaration is so definitely feminine that it doesn't have to be true to be enjoyable. It probably means that some newspapers have opposed certain schemes the lady, bless her heart, favored. So why shouldn't she jump 'em all?

And it cannot be denied that Lady Astor's merry chatter is studded with words of wisdom. Discussing nursery schools, she says that in England a small fee is charged all parents "because human nature doesn't appreciate anything it gets free."

Fife And Drum.

From the New York Times.

Peace lovers will be glad to learn that military music is on its way out. From army maneuvers in Texas it is reported that tentative plans have cut down the number of bands in an infantry division from eight to one, and even this may be abolished. Peace lovers have felt that the martial spirit feeds on parades. The heart of a parade is obviously the band with or without the drum major.

But, of course, it is open to doubt whether abolition of the marching fifes and drums and brasses really means an end of the music that sets the feet to beating time and drowns out the grim details of the trenches. We may still hear the band play, over the radio. The whole Army is pretty well mechanized by now, and there is no reason why its music should not be. In fact, radio's martial strains will go where band musicians today do not go, into the very trenches.

What could be more characteristic of our topsy-turvy civilization than a 45-mile-an-hour tank going into action to radio music like any taxi driver on Park avenue?

Single-Term Congressmen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many of us don't like the way Congress behaves. There are numerous counts in the indictment. But what might one reasonably expect with the legislative office tied up to a scheme of biennial hiring and firing all over the place, regardless of whatever else might be afoot, or how well the candidates for rehiring had acted for the common good?

A sure way to get nearer the service from Congress we want would be to limit the office to one term of such length, if not for life, as to offer the chance of a career for the best we have. It would not be long until we should have a real national Congress to deal in a national way with strictly national problems, in an atmosphere akin to that of our Supreme Court, free of all unholy association or influence.

One-half or less of the present membership could do the job under such conditions without loss of sleep through night sessions, and they'd have the benefit of a deal more of disinterested criticism and advice than is now offered.

But we couldn't have anything like that. It would spell the end of party government—the life blood of democracy, as the politically-minded would have us believe. Besides, our army of unemployed is too large to think of adding to it a host of politicians and their office help. It would not disrupt us, however, to try doubling the length of the terms all around including the executive branch.

One thing sure, it would give us that much more time between political sprees in which to sober up and patch our economic fences while there is something left of them to keep us from going bolshevik.

WALTER N. CAMPBELL.
Washington, Dec. 22.

Christmas Trees.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I find little cause for rejoicing in reading of the enormous annual destruction of evergreen trees for our Christmas holidays, over 100,000 in Washington alone.

A large percentage of these become merely a glut on the market and find their way to the local dump heaps to perish pathetically without even their brief hour or two of tinsel glory.

How much better if the merchants who line Santa Claus lanes with rootless forest trees, thrust into receptacles to conceal their amputations, were to concentrate on having one beautiful living evergreen tree planted in each local public area. This would be a thing of beauty and a joy the year round and could be used annually as the official neighborhood Christmas tree, similar to the one in Lafayette Square.

In all of the material world a tree is perhaps the only living thing that grows lovelier with the years instead of uglier. So man in his ruthlessness hacks it down.

THERESE H. RUSSELL.
Washington, Dec. 26.

Independent Ireland.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wednesday, December 29, is a notable day in the world's most notable conflict and a date of profound interest to every genuine American.

It marks the greatest step ever taken toward the freedom and independence of Ireland.

It marks all but the complete realization of the object for which the Irish people have struggled for more than seven centuries.

In all the annals of mankind there is no parallel to that struggle and nothing approaching it in splendor of heroic devotion and unchanging purpose.

There is today no more of the hated old "Free State." In its place arises Ireland restored to national existence with its good old Irish name revived and revered—Eire.

In the explicit and memorable language of the new constitution, today Ireland becomes "a sovereign, independent, democratic state."

Nothing is left but a single shred of the grievous bonds that once were forced upon her by an alien soldiery and that insignificant and nominal shred—being only her course in external relations—she has proclaimed her intention to sever at her discretion.

Today the new constitution of Eire, adopted by the overwhelming vote of her people, becomes the law of the land and the title of King George VI is amended, "King of Great Britain" he may be but no longer of "and Ireland."

CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL,
ANDREW L. HICKEY.

Unsettling Addresses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Associated Press in its market report of December 28 stated that "industrial leaders tumbled 1 to more than 5 points in the day's market" and that "brokers said speculative forces were depressed by the address of Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson, in which 'big business' and monopoly 'profiteering' were blamed for the economic slump."

And your special correspondent, on the same date, said that "attention in the share market was concentrated on the new outburst against business by Government spokesmen."

The President is represented in the press as adopting a conciliatory attitude toward business, yet high Government officials, who command audiences, are permitted to make addresses which tend to inflame the people against big business and to aggravate a situation sufficiently serious without such aggravation.

This would seem to be no time for recriminations about the causes of the recession, nor for sweeping generalizations against big business. If the Administration desires, notwithstanding the present delicate situation, to recommend to Congress legislation directed against big business why does it not proceed in a quiet and orderly way before Congress, which would enable the big business that the Administration has in mind to defend itself before Congressional committees, instead of permitting these demoralizing general attacks?

I submit that the President could greatly aid recovery if he would call off the high officials who go around the country making addresses or giving interviews which tend to alarm the people, demoralize the security markets, and widen the breach between business and the Administration.

HENRY A. HAYWARD.
Washington, Dec. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If this Administration has for its object the promotion of recovery—at times such has seemed to be the case—something should be done about Administration orators who speak out of turn to national audiences. These tend, when their offenses become frequent enough, to blight even the spirit of co-operation.

If it is the private opinion of lesser big shots that big business is interchangeable with the practice of piracy, they should keep this good news under wraps until a turn has occurred. Needless to say a few more talks like one recently given will, if left unchallenged, go far toward converting this recession into a galloping depression.

WALTER BAHNSEN.
Washington, Dec. 28.

Prevalent Misconception?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A friend of far above average intelligence on a business visit to Washington, D. C., expressed the opinion that the Federal Government pays a large proportion of cost of local government.

It would pay us who pay these taxes to ascertain if this opinion is prevalent throughout this Nation by having the Institute of Public Opinion make a survey. If the survey shows this misconception is general, we should insert paid advertisements stating the facts in leading papers throughout the Nation and educate the public as to what a poor government we have here in Washington, and why.

It is generally accepted that any city or State has no better government than they deserve. When we go after a better local government with the same intelligence that a manufacturer goes after sales, we can expect some improvement.

HOWARD D. WOODSON.

Contrasting Views On Vivisection.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Frankly, the stream of letters reaching your columns protesting against vivisection is getting me down. The writers are the same people who would protest any removal of the starlings that help to keep the city messed up.

They prate about so-called "lords of creation," meaning those who experiment on animals in the name of science. Surely they don't think that these men are inflicting pain merely for the fun of it. In fact, they are doing just the opposite; they are trying to prevent pain and suffering on the part of humans. In other words, they may kill a dog that might be useful for a pet, but someone's child will eventually be saved because of these experiments.

The medical profession has advanced because of experiments, and will continue to do so, in spite of the sobbing of so-called animal lovers. Do they protest because of suffering humanity on every side? Of course they don't, but they work themselves up into a lather if you simply speak unkindly to a dog.

Let us look at things in a clear, calm manner. These experiments are carried on for the sake of humanity. Of this there can be no doubt. Of the successes there also can be no doubt. What are the lives of a few dogs as compared to the saving of many humans? If protesters had their way the medical profession would receive a death blow. Let us utilize whatever sympathy we may have for suffering humans, and then if there is any left over we can give it to the dogs.

As for being ashamed to look a dog in the face if you did not protest against the treatment of his brothers, that is a lot of poppycock. Simply throw him a bone and he will forgive you. L. A. S.
Washington, Dec. 23.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I don't want to monopolize letter space in The Post, but am always ready to stand back of what I write. Animal experimentation covers a wide range, from painless feeding experiments to intense suffering in real "vivisectional" experiments. "Pro-Lab" must know, as well as I do, that anesthetics are not, and cannot, be used in many painful experiments. And how about the animals after the experiments? I have seen mice inoculated with cancer! Has any good come from that?

"Pro-Lab" mentions vaccination, diphtheria treatment and Pasteur's anti-rabic treatment. For the first I hope he will read my letter to The Post in the September 5 issue. For the rest, a public debate, or discussion, would be the best method of elaborating the views of both sides of this large question.

Drugs and various inoculations affect animals so differently from the way they affect man that no useful results can be gained, as the last experiment must always be performed on man.

The Post Impressionist

Table For Two.

I HAD often wondered what it might be like to watch a perfect stranger reading something I had written. It certainly would be an experience that would strike the chords of one's vanity; but you couldn't very well plan on it; and after all it didn't occur very often, I imagined, so why worry?

Then, one day, it did happen to me. I had gone for lunch into one of those cafeterias, where all you have to do is to snatch a trayful of victuals and then trudge around like a lost soul hunting for a place to lay down its burden. Finally I found a table for two and unloaded opposite what I took to be a retired clergyman. He was eating macaroni and cheese, but that is another story.

He was also reading a newspaper. That it was this newspaper, and that it contained in this column a little piece that I had written (something about butterflies) was but a coincidence. Further than that—he was reading the editorial page.

* * * *

I must describe him a bit. He was an elderly but not decrepit gentleman, a little stoop-shouldered. His hair was gray and rather evenly distributed around the periphery of a large, fine, old head; his eyebrows were gray and shaggy; his face rather pallid, kind but intelligent-looking, with a scowl that was not really a scowl. He wore a suit that once must have been quite black, a clerical vest, and, as we used to say, his collar on backward.

He gave me a quick glance as I sat down, and then, between bites of the ungodly dish he had deliberately selected, resumed his reading, facilitated by an eyeglass held in his left hand and by an accompanying squint. It was an editorial—something about a new zoning law. Then, without unfolding the paper, he skipped over a column to the local elections; then over to the minimum wage.

Finally he reached the cartoon, but its size made it out of focus, and so he dropped down to the letters to the editor. Hmmm . . . he was creeping up on me, but by this time my sandwich was gone and my coffee, too. I couldn't just sit there waiting with that breathless look that I knew must be hanging on my face. Neither could I leave without ever knowing, so I sent for a piece of pie and another cup of coffee and tried my best to appear disinterested.

Then my heart gave a little jump as I realized what was happening. He had arrived at the top of my column. I must have turned pale out loud, for he suddenly looked up at me, put down his eyeglass, and scrambled up another forkful of macaroni and cheese, which looked somehow as I felt. But presently he picked up the glass again and read on, words that I had written, and all the while I watched his face. I thought he smiled once, but I wasn't quite sure.

He was getting on down now to the place where the paper was folded across the middle, beyond which, probably because of the limitations of the small table, he had not yet ventured. The question was: Would he now unfold and finish the piece? What a triumph for me if he did!

It was with real avidity that he had read the first half column, and I began to feel as I never felt before. I was convinced that I had reached a customer; perhaps I had even moved him in some way—this man who himself had doubtless moved whole congregations by an eloquence now desiccated. Why didn't I say to him: "Pardon me, sir, but do you happen to know that you are sitting across from the person who wrote that?" But that would be a puerile thing to do and would break the spell.

But these cogitations were short-lived, for he did not go beyond the crease. He stopped right there, laid down his eyeglass, and quit. I don't know how I looked, but I know my heart flopped back again, and he looked up right square at me and gave me one of the silliest looks that I ever saw on a human face. It was just as if he had known it was I all the time. He began to drink his coffee, black and cold as a pump-handle.

I got up and went out. Outside I looked back through the window just in case. But he was putting on his overcoat and stuffing the newspaper into his pocket.

I have seen him there many times since then, and later I found out who he was, but I won't tell, other than to say that he is an unusually learned man. A man of very wide reading, no doubt.

The Complex Life.

Canadian immigration officials, according to a dispatch from Vancouver, are faced with this interesting problem.

An East Indian entered the United States illegally and there married a Mexican woman who had also entered this country illegally.

They had a son born here.

And then all three entered Canada illegally.

The father can be deported to India, but India will not receive his wife or son.

The son may claim American citizenship, but the United States will not admit his father or mother.

And Mexico, which will take back the mother, will have nothing to do with her son or husband.

The family doesn't want to be broken up.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler.

Mr. Farley's Message.

A FEW WEEKS AGO Jim Farley said that if he had a message for the Nation he would prefer to send it by radio, as the papers would edit out all the raisins if he gave it to them. Some time earlier he had made a radio speech in which he denounced a time-honored subsidy of the newspaper and magazine business, and he was sore because that message was widely ignored by the daily press.

PEGLER.

Now, for a fact, the second-class postage subsidy of the press is such an old story that some editors may have hung it on the dead hook on the ground that its news value had long ago expired, but the omission of Jim's remarks did give support to his claim that the papers silence copy which is inimical to their own interests.

The Postoffice Department claims that in the last ten years alone, to say nothing of all the years since the special postal rates were established in 1851, the newspaper and periodical press has enjoyed a camouflaged subsidy of more than $1,000,000,000.

This sum represents the department's own estimate of the difference between the postage paid for handling papers and magazines and the actual cost of providing this service. The breakdown, as the statisticians call figure analysis, may be disputed by the defense, but that is the Postoffice Department's story and has been for many years.

JIM RAISED the first-class postage rate and hornswoggled a few odd millions out of the 9,000,000 stamp collectors in the U. S. A. by turning out so many special memorial issues that the printing and engraving staffs began to think they were working for a funny paper. He also raised the rate for the advertising content of second-class matter, but it was reduced to the old figures after two years, whereas the first-class rate is still up there.

And it is the contention of the postoffice in its published figures that the press of the country, meaning magazines as well as papers, enjoys a Government subsidy in the form of insufficient postal rates while it hollers calamity about the subsidies to other industries and scolds successive Postmasters General for failing to break even. The postoffice claims that the press pays 20 cents for a dollar's worth of postal service, and some of the publishers claim that it is the subscriber who gets the subsidy, as he would have to pay more for his reading and advertising matter if the rate were raised.

That was the proposition when the privilege was established in 1851. The country was sparsely settled, and the statesmen thought the people deserved reading lessons even at the cost of a little deficit. Under some conditions, to this very day, certain publications are carried and delivered absolutely free within the county of publication, but that privilege, though wrong, is a small matter, accounting for only $8,000,000 a year of the deficiency on press matter.

• • • •

THE ARGUMENT occurs at the point where the postoffice claims to handle press matter as first-class mail for the second-class rate. First-class matter pays 48 cents a pound and second-class pays a variety of rates up to 7 cents a pound for advertising content.

Newspaper people insist that a magazine or paper receives more leisurely and less careful treatment than first-class letters, but there seems to be no disposition on the part of the press to demand equal treatment at the much cheaper rate. The magazines apparently get more benefit than the daily or Sunday papers, however, because they do a great mail subscription business, whereas the papers, what with street sales, route carriers and truck delivery, have come to avoid the mails as being too slow.

At any rate, here is the message which Mr. Farley wanted to get over to the Nation and thought he couldn't convey through the press:—That the press, which in many cases is very righteous about subsidies and in most cases is very ticklish about its freedom, not only enjoys an important Government subsidy and refuses to agitate the matter with the taxpayers but compromises its independence by accepting a very valuable favor from the Government.

And if the department's figures are correct, then the amount which might be gained by taxing the exempt salaries of public officials and employes is very paltry picking by comparison. Now we will see whether Mr. Farley's message gets past the perfidious conspiracy of silence. If you don't see this, let me know.

China's Prospects

Actions Of Japanese In Taking Over Shanghai Foreshadow Ultimate Peace Terms To Be Imposed On Entire Nation.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

SEVERED FROM the rest of China, Shanghai has become a vast vacuum in which Japanese military "brain trusters" are freely experimenting with their pet political and economic schemes. Included among these are plans for the creation of pro-Nipponese administrations here and in Nanking, assumption of control over Chinese judiciary, financial and various revenue-bearing organs, and, finally, a reorganization of the foreign municipal council so as to give the Japanese a decisive voice in the management of the Foreign Settlement.

The legal cloak which will eventually wrap the Japanese conquest of China is now being spun here, with the army's political agents rapidly corralling job-seeking Chinese politicos and bankers into the Japanese camp.

The Japanese army must have China's recognition of its gains in North and Central China. It must also have China's acceptance of demands, providing for the country's virtual political, economic and military subjection to the land of Yamato. For various reasons, the most important of which is the immense pressure of public opinion, the Nanking government in its present form can neither recognize Japan's gains nor entertain the latter's peace terms. Therefore, the Japanese feel that they must set up a new administration in Nanking in opposition to the present government.

Experts Drafting Terms To Be Presented To China.

JAPANESE experts here and in Tokyo are undoubtedly drafting the terms they will present to China, represented either by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek or, if he proves to be obstreperous, by a more pro-Japanese regime in Nanking.

It is difficult to predict the exact nature of these terms. Yet, enough has been said by Japan's military and diplomatic spokesmen and her rigidly controlled press to make a fairly accurate surmise. Roughly, the demands will be of the following nature.

1. China's agreement to wage a relentless war on communism. Possibly a tacit consent to help Japan in a war with Russia.
2. Acceptance of the Japanese plans for the development of China's economy in a manner which would make it complementary to Japan's. In other words, expression of readiness to produce the raw materials for the foundries and mills of Japan.
3. Grant of autonomy to the five northern provinces of Chahar, Suiyuan, Shansi, Hopei and Shantung, most of which are already under complete Japanese military occupation.
4. Recognition of the newly established state of Khokho in Inner Mongolia and, possibly, recognition of Manchukuo.
5. A drastic downward revision of the customs rates on goods which Japan exports to China. The puppet Chinese administration in North China has already drastically slashed tariff rates on ten items exported by Japan.
6. Wide employment of Japanese advisers by the financial, military, educational, industrial and other branches of the government and a severance of ties linking the present administration with foreign powers.
7. Possibly, a virtual demilitarization of China.
8. Establishment of direct aerial communication between Japan and all parts of China and, possibly, cancellation of privileges enjoyed by British and American aviation interests, principally the Pan-American Airways.
9. Preferential treatment of Japan in the purchase of all commodities needed in the economic rehabilitation of China.
10. Suppression of the Kuomintang and all other anti-Japanese groups and the expurgation of anti-Japanese sentiments from school books and other publications.

Japanese Press Demands Land And Money In China.

WHILE Premier Prince Ayamaro Konoye and members of his cabinet have repeatedly disclaimed desire for China's territory or political domination of the country, the press of the nation had openly demanded land, money and absolute control over the destinies of China.

The Tokyo Hochi has already suggested the creation of Japanese concessions in China's major cities, while the Nichi-Nichi, one of Tokyo's two leading papers, declared that China must be made to pay in cash and kind the cost of the war to Japan.

The Hochi's set of demands, said to have been drafted by Gen. Iwane Matsui, commander in chief of the Japanese forces here, himself, comprise the following conditions:

1. Recognition of Manchukuo.
2. Establishment of autonomous anti-Communist administrations in North China and Inner Mongolia under Japanese protection.
3. Appointment of a Japanese as inspector-general of the customs and a downward revision of the customs schedule so as to increase the volume of Sino-Japanese trade.
4. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's appointment as President of China, on the condition that he will subscribe to the tripartite anti-Comintern pact.
5. Ban on the use of military aircraft by China and transfer to Japan of all civil aviation rights in that country.
6. Disarming of the Chinese army, with the exception of a small number of troops needed to maintain internal order.
7. Establishment of Japanese concessions in all leading Chinese ports, such as Shanghai, Foochow, Amoy, Hangchow, etc., as well as permanent occupation of all the islands along the China coast now under Japanese control.

Without doubt no such terms have as yet been prepared by Gen. Matsui, but the above demands unquestionably represent the views entertained by a large, vocal and influential section of the Japanese officialdom, both civil and military.

In an interview with the Japanese press here, Gen. Matsui gave recently a broad outline of the Japanese army's desires in China. The following points, he declared, must be realized by the Chinese government and people:

"The first point is to make the Nanking government abandon the policy of depending on European countries and America on the one hand, and on the other, to have European people and Americans clearly realize the fact that their attitude in favor of this policy taken by the Chinese government would never contribute to the security of peace in the Orient.

"The second point is to make the Chinese people recognize that Japanese troops are the real friends of China, and have been sacrificing themselves in the current incident to rescue 400,000,000 Chinese, correcting the latter's misconceptions brought about by the anti-Japanese policy pursued by Nanking.

"The third point is to make foreigners residing along the Yangtze understand that it is useless for them to support China's anti-Nipponism."

Foreign City Council Dominated By Japanese.

THE FOREIGN city fathers are in a difficult position. With a strong and belligerent army surrounding the foreign-controlled areas, the municipal council can reject no Japanese demand without assurances of support from foreign powers which participate in the governments of these areas. Such assurances are not forthcoming.

Having taken over the administrative and political functions formerly exercised by China, the army-backed Japanese are now in a position to demand if not a controlling voice in the municipal council, then at least equality with the British. The latter can be counted upon to resist this demand.

Foreign-governed Shanghai, it must be pointed out, is more than a city of 2,000,000. It is the base of foreign influence in China. It is a safe haven to which foreigners flock in their frequent quarrels with the Chinese. It is, finally, to the Settlement and the French Concession that the Chinese escape from their co-nationals temporarily on the other side of the fence.

By holding Shanghai in the proper state of trepidation, the Japanese can ensure the cessation of foreign assistance to China. Moreover, by the skillful employment of threats to seize the foreign-governed areas and to use the customs and the post office for their own ends, the Japanese can browbeat the foreign authorities here into co-operation with Japan and tacit recognition of the latter's conquests.

Thus, whether to deprive the Chinese government of its most important base of operations or to dominate the foreign interests and activities here, the Japanese must control Shanghai. This aim, by force and guile, they are now achieving.

Is Rumania Going Fascist?

IN THE EUROPE of today governments tend to fall into three broad classifications. There are the democracies such as Great Britain, France and Czechoslovakia. There are the Fascist dictatorships with Germany and Italy as the outstanding examples. And, finally, there are those nations such as Rumania, Yugoslavia, Poland and Hungary who occupy a twilight zone between democracy and dictatorship. More specifically, the government of those lands, while democratic in form, tend to be dictatorial in nature.

It is these latter nations in particular that are the battlegrounds of the rival European ideologies, and the struggle within them reflects the fact that the real target of Fascist hostility is not communism but democracy. None of the semidemocratic, semidictatorial nations is in any danger of a Communist overturn. Every one of them, on the other hand, is threatened by fascism.

• • • •

NAMES ARE important. It makes a real difference at the present juncture of affairs in Europe and the world what name a nation gives to its form of government, however that government may operate in practice. That is why there was very justifiable alarm in the United States over the Vargas coup d'etat in Brazil even though the determining factor was domestic rather than foreign, i. e., German or Italian intrigue. For the adoption by the largest of Latin-American states of a dictatorial regime undisguised, as in the past, by democratic forms was rightly interpreted as a victory for the European dictators and a blow to the democracies.

For the same reason King Carol's appointment of Octavian Goga, coleader of the pro-Nazi, anti-Semitic National Christian Party as premier of Rumania has its distinctly ominous aspects. If this development meant what superficially it seems to mean, it would foreshadow the triumph of Hitlerist ideals in the largest of Balkan states, a split in the Little Entente, a blow to France and a victory for Germany and Italy. And, no doubt, this is precisely the meaning which the Fascist powers will want the world to read into present Rumanian developments.

ACTUALLY such an interpretation of King Carol's move does not quite hold water. It is quite true that the new premier is a worshiper of Hitler, favors a German rather than a French orientation for Rumania and if he could have his way would have that country join both the Berlin-Rome axis and the anti-Communist accord.

There happen to be others in Rumania who think as he does. There are, first of all, his fellow members of the National Christian Party whose coleader, Prof. Cuza, preached a virulent anti-Semitism before Hitler was even a house painter. There is the German element headed by Fritz Fabritius and Helmuth Wolff. Above all, there is the much-feared Iron Guards under the leadership of Zelea Codreanu.

The latter group made astonishing gains at the polls during the Christmas week elections. They captured over 60 seats in the lower chamber out of a total of 387. The present premier's party won less than a third as many.

The significant fact is, however, that there is no love lost between these Fascist groups. They hate each other even more, if that is possible, than they hate their common enemies. The fiercest fights in the recent political campaign were between rival Fascist groups.

• • • •

THE APPOINTMENT of Goga as premier may therefore be interpreted as a maneuver by King Carol to employ one Fascist faction to fight a more dangerous one. At least Goga is not anti-Carol as the Iron Guards are. And above all it is the maintenance of his own power that interests the Rumanian monarch more than anything else.

It is certainly of interest that while naming a Fascist to the premiership the principal administrative posts in the cabinet were turned over to non-Fascists, many of them former members of the democratically minded and pro-French Peasant Party.

Certainly Rumania has little to gain and much to lose by identifying itself with the Berlin-Rome axis. Rumania was one of the greatest beneficiaries of the World War. It is now twice the size it was before 1914. Any increase in the power and prestige of the nations which favor the upset of the status quo can be very dangerous to Rumania. At the same time the weakening of the collective system as typified in the League of Nations and the weakening of France's strategic position as a result of the rearmament of the Rhineland have naturally tended to impel Rumania to come to terms with Germany and Italy.

LIKE POLAND, Rumania, under Carol's leadership, wants to remain pro-French while not being anti-German. It may prove difficult to carry water on both these shoulders. But that is precisely what Carol hopes to do.

Rumania today as was Yugoslavia before the assassination of King Alexander is a nation dominated by its monarch. For four years Carol kept Tataresco in office despite growing opposition to him. Then Tataresco met defeat at the polls. Carol has therefore had to shift his ground. He can no longer depend on the Liberals who do not now command a majority in Parliament. He must look to others. But no parliamentary combination appears possible at the moment.

So the government that has now come into being at Bucharest is primarily one made up of men of diverse parties and differing views but all loyal to him. And in time-honored Rumanian fashion the new regime may before long be legitimized at the polls. The accident of a fortnight ago when the government lost out in an election may not be repeated in the next balloting.

Who Is A Gentleman?

By William Lyon Phelps

Definitions.

There are still some persons who believe this depends entirely on birth; thus if you are of noble or aristocratic descent, you are a gentleman, even if your character is detestable. And if you lack this wholly accidental quality, no amount of good behavior will admit you to the ranks of gentlemen. Such a classification seems obsolete; but I found it definitely stated and believed and approved by a writer of some standing only ten years ago.

I think, for general purposes, we can regard such a definition as a curiosity.

In the periodical called The Sign in 1926 the following description was I believe first printed. It was discovered in an ancient dwelling in Gloucestershire, England, framed and hung over the mantelpiece of a tapestried sitting room. So says James M. Marsh, of Brookville, Pa., in a letter in the New York Times.

• • • •

"The true gentleman is God's servant, the world's master, and his own man. Virtue is his business, study his recreation, contentment his rest, and happiness his reward. God is his Father, Jesus Christ his Saviour, the saints his brethren, and all that need him his friend. Devotion is his chaplain, chastity his chamberlain, sobriety his butler, temperance his cook, hospitality his housekeeper, Providence his steward, charity his treasure, piety his mistress of the house, and discretion his porter to let in or out, as most fit. Thus is his whole family made up of virtue, and he is the true master of his house. He is necessitated to be in the world on his way to heaven; but he walks through it as fast as he can, and all his business by the way is to make himself and others happy. Take him in two words—a man and a Christian."

• • • •

This is all the more interesting because it seems to have come down almost from feudal times.

In the best sense a gentleman has been the same in all times and places. Years ago I heard a Chinese student give a lecture on the gentleman as conceived by Mencius, centuries before Christ. It would have been a good description of an American gentleman of the twentieth century. In Homer, Prince Hector of Troy, were he alive today, would be the most popular and admired young man in every city in our modern world.

Now It Can Be Told.

NOW IT CAN be told—now that Santa Claus has arrived safely back at the North Pole. He had a mighty close call this year, though. He almost gave the whole thing away. And he got stuck in a telephone booth while waiting for the North Pole special.

McCARTHY.

"I pulled a fast one," Capt. Harry Bede, who played Santa Claus in one of the local department stores, told me. "I almost spilled the beans. Not once—but twice.

"It was the day before Christmas, and they forgot to wise me up that I should be back at the North Pole. There I was on the morning before Christmas, right back at my old stand, very peaceful and contented like.

"I was just sitting there, contemplating a warm-up ride through the aisles on a tricycle. But I'd just eaten breakfast so I decided to put it off for a while, and just doze a bit in my chair.

"Well, the first I knew, I heard somebody askin' me what the hell am I doin' there. I jumped up, and it was one of the store big shots, so I told him I guess I'd just dozed off.

"'That's not what I'm talkin' about,' the store big shot said. 'You're not supposed to be here at all today. You're supposed to be back at the North Pole.

"'Why, bless my soul' I said to him, Capt. Bede told me. 'I forgot all about it.'

So Capt. Bede made a lightning quick change and sneaked out of the store on his way to the North Pole.

"Of course I wasn't really going there," he said. "I live out here at the Martha Washington Tourist Camp. I've got a trailer out there. But I did feel just as though I was goin' to the Pole, because as far as Santa Claus went I was through for the year. And I sort of regretted it.

• • • •

"I FIGURED I was through for this year," Capt. Bede said. "But you can never count on a thing when kids are concerned. I was standing in the bus station when I heard a couple of kids sayin,' 'Oh, pa, can't we see Santy. You said we could.'

"'I'm through trampin' around in this rain,' their old man said. 'You can see him next year.'

"What a yap that guy was," Capt. Bede said. "He didn't even think of the gag about Santa having gone back to the Pole, already. Well, the kids kept it up, and they kept pesterin' the old man.

"Finally he gave one of the kids a push, and the kid whacked his noggin on the door. Well, that was a little too much for me. I got sore. I butted in.

"'You kids want to see Santy?' I asked 'em. And they told me they sure did. All the time, the old man looks pretty sour at the whole idea. 'I'll fix it up for you,' I said. 'I saw Santy go into the back room over there, and he ought to be out any minute. In fact I heard him say he was going to use the phone, so he ought to be over by the phone booth any minute.'

"I gave the old sourpuss the wink," Capt. Bede said, "and told the kide I'd give their old man the high sign when I spotted Santy. Then I whipped over into the back room, and ducked into my Santa coat, and whiskers.

"I didn't want to take all the trouble to put the pants on, so that's why I told 'em I'd meet 'em by the phone booth. I ducked into the phone booth, and then stuck my head out to give the old man the high sign.

"When the kids came up, and saw me in there phoning, their eyes liked to have popped out. Then I stuck my head around the door, and wished 'em a merry Christmas. Well, they nearly busted with surprise. But their old man was still pretty thick.

"Instead of realizing my predicament he let the kids stand and stare at me, and I couldn't walk out and show regular clothes on from the waist down so I pretended like I had to do a lot of phoning. I told the kids I'd bring 'em what they wanted for Christmas, and then I turned back and closed the glass door.

"Still the old man didn't catch wise or play ball. You'd have thought he'd have dragged 'em away after a while. But he didn't. He just let 'em stand there, and I began to sweat in the phone booth, and the kids kept watchin' me with their eyes poppin' out of their heads."

"Well, what did you finally do?" I asked Capt. Bede.

"Do," he said, "I stayed in that phone booth 'til the kids had to leave on the bus. But I never gave it away. No, sir! Even if I did miss my own bus!"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

'Twas Told to Us.

Is it true that the Federal employe unions look disapprovingly upon those mild recreational and social organizations in the Government service? We're told so. It was said that the unions feel the social groups offer a strong appeal to the joiner-minded who might join the unions if the pull wasn't so strong from the social groups. The unions, our informant believed, wanted all activity—even social activity—to come under the union scope. In any event, some people are talking about it in the corridors.

We wish a happy journey to Florida for Alice Atkinson, who is a secretary in Agriculture's Office of Education. And a journey free of thefts—there have been enough for her. Last May, someone stole her automobile; just recently her newer car was stolen, taken 10 miles in the country and stripped of removable parts.

Old Reliable.

Nomination as the most attentive person in Agriculture to his duties: Dr. W. W. Stockberger, the personnel director. Call when you will within the office hours and you will find him at his desk . . . Edwin C. Powell, senior editor, Division of Publications, Agriculture, will soon be rising with the dawn, as is his wont when spring trips back to the land. He is early up to work his field of daffodils, a field half-acre in size that has become one of the beauty spots of the Maryland countryside. And Powell is himself one of the daffodil authorities in the United States . . . So few males takin up stenography, and they would have such a swell opportunity in the Federal service, someone comes in to remind us. Many administrative heads prefer a male stenographer to the female brand, says he, adding that in America's far-flung possessions there is much secretarial work to be done in regions and under conditions where the female would be unsuited . . .

Three Commerce Department employes, one with 50 years of faithful service to his credit, will be retired Saturday. They are: Louis P. Keyser, Coast and Geodetic Survey, 50 years, 10 months; Louise C. Edmunds, Patent Office, 44 years, 9 months, and Henry Randall, Standards, 17 years, 4 months . . .

Church Dept.

Timothy J. O'Shanahan, of Washington—whose wife is employed at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—has accepted a call to the pastorate of Central Church of Christ, Martinsburg, W. Va. Mr. and Mrs. O'Shanahan spent the Christmas holidays with members of the congregation. They will continue to reside in Washington for the time being, going to Martinsburg for the Sunday services . . . Why doesn't the Federal Government do something to make Virginia people take an interest in those marvelously restored Civil War battlefields just east of Richmond? The Government has spent thousands of dollars on the fields, and through these wind some excellent roads for the motorist. The Virginia State military historian called our attention to it; said that Richmonders, people in general, seem hardly aware that such an interesting place exists. If they care nothing for the historical connections of the fields, they surely would enjoy auto rides through a country so intensely quiet, a country of such pastoral inducements, he felt. The distribution of some first-rate literature by the Government might create the wanted interest; for after all, the Federal Government has spent thousands of dollars therein and it seems senseless now to leave the whole interesting area to nothing more than the sweet but all the same unreckoning songs of the birds . . .

Wyeth also said the tables should be constructed of material which will withstand abuse of lighted cigars and cigarettes.

Unions Give Most For County Relief

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—Labor organizations contributed more than any other group to Allegany County's emergency relief fund, an analysis of contribution records showed today.

Union and union leaders sent $1,993 to the $5,680 fund.

Towns in the county gave $1,308 from municipal funds. Cumberland appropriated $1,000 to start the drive for money, and Frostburg contributed $303.

U.S.S. Panay Bombing as Shot by the Moving Picture Camera

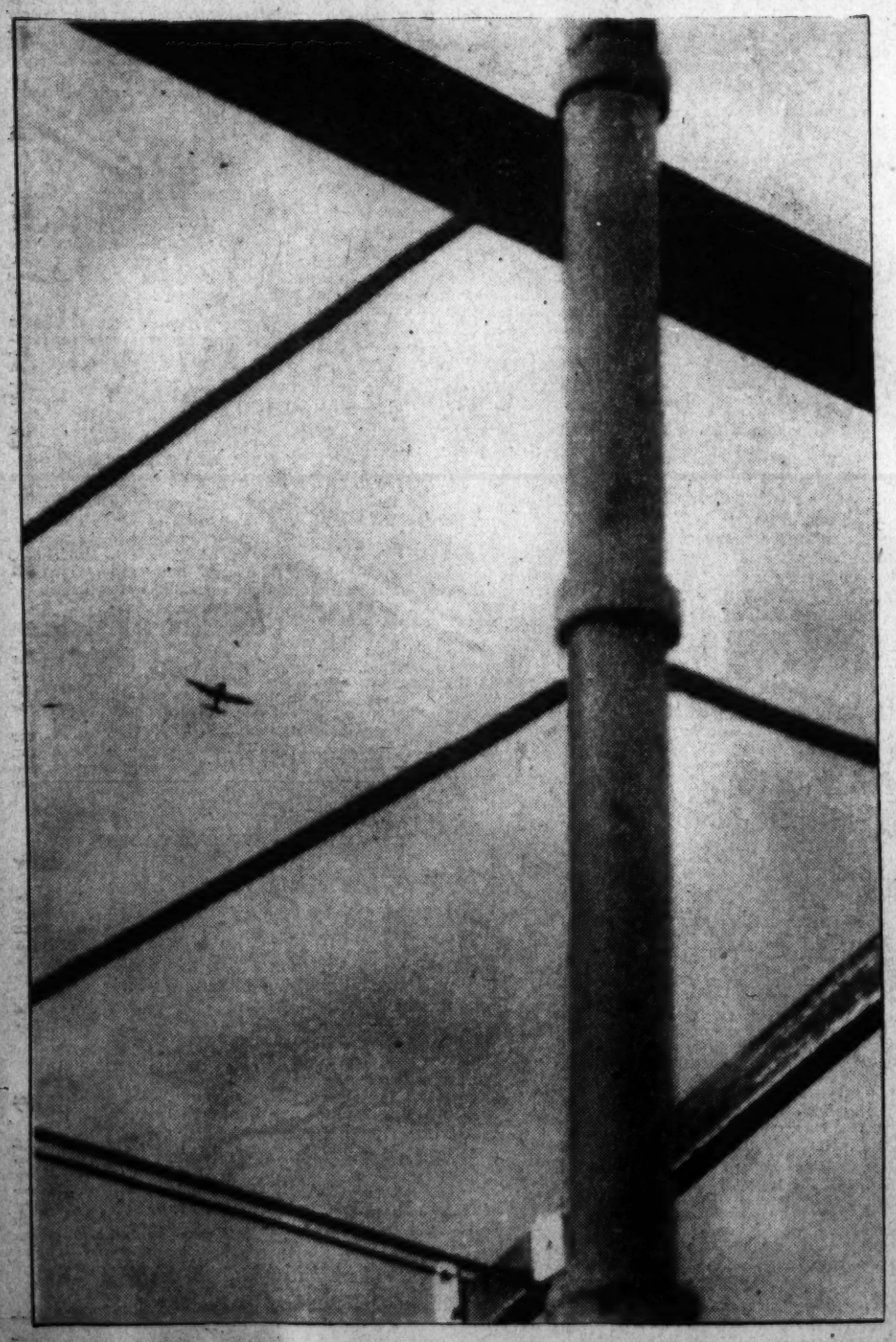
Lieut. Comdr. Hughes Smiles Despite His Shattered Hip

Although he lost his ship and was wounded seriously, the commander of the Panay bravely smiled from his place of concealment in reeds along the Yangtze, where survivors carried him after the bombing. He was moved from the ship despite his protests. Survivors hid in the reeds because they feared further bombarding by Japanese planes. The picture below shows six of his men gently depositing their commander in the comparative safety of the marshy shore.

Hurry Up, Men, We're Bombed

The Panay became alive with scurrying men when the first Japanese bomb hit. Above, sailors are shown running for shelter and to man machine guns in an attempt to ward off the attack. Nine planes concentrated on the Panay until she sank, then turned to bomb three Standard Oil tankers. Five dead, many injured was the toll.



One of Nine Planes That Bombed Panay

The Japanese plane shown in the above picture high over the Panay's deck and eight just like it created an international incident when they bombed the United States gunboat while it was anchored in the Yangtze. Tons of bombs were dropped, 24 making direct hits on the American vessel. Three oil tankers also were victims. Survivors leaving the sinking Panay were machine-gunned.

The Survivors Were Carried on a Tortuous Trail

Chinese soldiers carry a Panay stretcher case through a tiny village to safety after survivors left their hiding place in the reeds along the marshy Yangtze shore. It was a 60-mile march, and painful for wounded and uninjured alike. The man in the stretcher above is believed to be the Panay's skipper, Lieut. Comdr. Hughes, a victim of the first bomb.

Better Hunting In Va. Foreseen By Game Head

Nolting Calls Present Open Season the Best in Many Years.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 29.—Carl H. Nolting, chairman of the State Game and Inland Fisheries Commission, predicted today hunting in Virginia would be better next season that this.

"The hunting year 1937 presented two phases of the sportsman," Nolting said. "The hunting season from January 1 to 31 was one of the most unsatisfactory seasons in many years. The present open season, however, is just the reverse. There has been better hunting of all species of game, except in several counties on our northern borders, than in several years.

"If we are fortunate enough not to have any blizzards this winter, hunting should be still better next season."

Nolting said the contributing factor was the increased interest in conservation of wild life.

Elkton Mill Slows Marriage Output To 10,600 in 1937

Elkton, Md., Dec. 29 (AP).—The marriage mill here, operating its $150,000 business under the shadow of a referendum which may shut it down in 1938, united more than 10,600 couples in 1937—a total about 100 below the 1936 mark.

The Legislature early this year enacted a law requiring couples to wait 48 hours before they may be married under a Maryland license. More than 10,000 persons signed a petition asking a referendum on the law, and its action was suspended until the general election next fall.

Nearly every State in the union had at least one of its citizens married here, but the majority came from Pennsylvania, New York, Delaware, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Elkton itself, scene of more than 10,000 marriages yearly, has a population of only 3,331.

3 Youths Held For Grand Jury In Gun Battle

Trio Accused of Robbery of Beltsville Gas Station Aide.

Three Philadelphia youths who shot it out with Prince Georges County police in an 85-mile an hour chase into Washington last week after holding up a gas station at Beltsville, Md., were held for the grand jury and committed to the Upper Marlboro, Md. Jail yesterday under bond of $10,000 each.

Meanwhile, both the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Philadelphia police sought to extradite the youths. The F. B. I. wants the youths for transporting stolen automobiles across state lines. Detective Sergt. James A. Downing, of the Philadelphia police, said the youths were wanted there for questioning in connection with the shooting of a man and a series of six hold-ups.

The youths are Frederic Hartung, 17; Lawrence Billerbeck, 17 and Charles Sheldon, 18. All were arraigned yesterday before Police Judge George B. Merrick, at Hyattsville, Md.

Sheldon pleaded guilty to charges of assault with intent to kill, theft of an automobile and robbery of the gas station.

Hartung pleaded guilty to charges of carrying concealed weapons and robbery.

Billerbeck pleaded guilty to larceny of an automobile and robbery.

E. J. Jarvis, Beltsville station attendant, testified the youths ordered gas and when he asked for his money, thrust two pistols into his face, saying:

"This is the way we pay."

Jarvis notified county police at the Hyattsville substation several miles south on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard in the direction the boys were headed.

Officers Richard Pearson and Henry Briscoe, both newly appointed members of the county force, took up the chase at Hyattsville. At Colmar Manor, Pearson said one of the youths opened fire at the police car. From there into Third and K streets northeast, where the youths surrendered, a gun battle ensued.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husband Who Abandoned Wife Once Now Begs Her to Return, Avowing Reform; What Should She Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a wife and mother, 19 years old. I have two children, an 18-month-old girl and a month-old son. Eight months ago their father left me to return to his people in Virginia. He has never seen his son. The reason we are separated is because he is a drunkard and mean when he drinks. After staying with his family for a while, he returned to the city to work. He has written me several letters telling me he has stopped drinking, and begging me to come back to him and bring the children. He says he will do right by us.

* * * * *

But my parents dislike him and want me to get a divorce. Also, a fellow I went with before I was married has been coming to see me frequently. Several times he has urged me to get a divorce and marry him. But I don't love him. I love my husband, even though he does drink, and I don't want a divorce. He is not allowed to come to my home because my dad hates him and says he will kill him. Please tell me what I should do. I would love to be with my husband if I thought he had stopped drinking. WORRIED MOTHER.

* * * *

DEAR WORRIED MOTHER: In view of the fact that your husband basely deserted you before your second child was born, it seems to me you would be a gullible, sentimental, self-indulgent fool to return to him on the mere promise that he "will do right by" you in future. It would, in my opinion, be the height of folly to commit yourself into his care a second time until he has furnished undisputable evidence that he can keep that promise.

* * * *

The thing to do is to put him on probation to prove himself. Give him a year's trial period in which to show he can climb back up to a self-respecting level of living. Write and tell him if he is in deadly earnest about reforming; about wanting his family back, that he should be man enough to face your father, make peace with him, and obtain permission to see you at regular intervals. Tell him it is impossible for you to make any apologies or explanations for him that would be accepted by your parents; that he must stand on his own feet in their sight; that it is up to him to present himself in a condition which indicates that he is keeping continuously sober, and it is likewise obligatory upon him to provide you with a regular monthly allowance which in itself will prove to your parents that he can, and is willing to, support his wife and babies.

* * * *

Tell him you love him, if you like; tell him you would like nothing better than to return to him, if it were only possible, but that your first concern now must be for the children, and that for the present, at least, you feel you must keep them where they are assured of adequate physical care, in the way of food, shelter and clothing. You might tell him, too, that your parents are insisting upon a divorce, and that while the idea is shocking to you, inasmuch as you do care so much for him, nevertheless you can see their point of view, and if he doesn't act quickly to change the face of the situation, you may be driven to accept it for yourself. Sometimes a challenge of this sort is needed to bring a happy-go-lucky, well-intentioned, but non-producing drunkard to his senses. If he realizes it is "put up or shut up," one ne'er-do-well in a thousand will actually start holding up his end of things.

M. H.

Young Girl's Queries.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: for the first time in my life I will be going to a formal party this year on New Year's Eve. I should like to know where to wear the corsage that is given to the girl. Should I wear it on my wrap and change it to my dress after I arrive at the party? Or should I put it on my dress in the beginning, and leave the wrap open? Then, there is the matter of gloves. Are the long, elbow-length gloves worn at hotel dances by young girls and kept on all evening? Or is it permissible to wear wrist-length gloves and take them off when the wrap is removed? When served a fruit cocktail does one spoon the fruit toward or away from one's self? Any information you can give me on these questions will be greatly appreciated. NINETEEN.

* * * *

DEAR NINETEEN: You may do just as you like about the corsage. You can fasten it to your dress in the first place, if you can affix it in such a position that your wrap won't crush it into a wilted mess, or you can wear it at the neckline or waistline of your wrap, or you can carry it in your hands in the manner of a nosegay, or you can even carry it to the party in the florist's box. Indeed, that is considered a decidedly smart and individual gesture by many socially self-assured young ladies. The important thing is to get it to the party fresh and unmussed.

* * * *

Elbow-length gloves are seldom worn throughout an evening of dancing and partying nowadays, for the simple reason that they are apt to be an uncomfortable nuisance, something on the order of a too-tight shoe. You will find the majority of girls wearing wrist-length gloves and checking them with their wraps.

* * * *

As a rule, any food eaten with a spoon is supposed to be "spooned" away from, rather than toward, the diner. However, with a fruit cocktail, I should say the sensible approach would be, simply, to "dig in," avoiding only the appearance of scraping the fruit toward the side of the dish nearest oneself.

M. H.

Distinctive Hair-dos for New Year's Eve

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 29.

THE VILLAGE has been quite excited and pleased with the visit of the John Barrymores. I saw them on one of their shopping tours, and I must say that Handome Jack hasn't looked so well in years. His face has lost its flabbiness and his keen eye has regained its sparkle. And he gives all the credit for his freshened state and his current splurge of hard movie work to the Little Woman.

ALICE HUGHES.

Certainly there has never been a madder romance and marriage than this. We all remember too well the insanities that marked its beginnings and its middle course—its pursuits, separations and reunions. I don't suppose one of us would have given a counterfeit nickel for the chances of this seemingly impossible match. But it has worked, for all that—at least, up to now. The Barrymore clan, like all true stage people, are as unpredictable as the weather.

Naturally, we have all eyed this young wife, Elaine, with unusual interest, for she's a home-town girl—a Riverside drive resident, a former student at Hunter College, and a girl with vim and zingo enough to carry her crush on The Great Profile right into the hospital room where he was laid up for repairs a couple of years ago.

She has matured much in the last few months—marriage to a Barrymore undoubtedly will do that. She carries herself with great poise, speaks with perfect assurance, and has changed from a schoolgirl into a woman in a very short time indeed. And she looks mighty pretty. Well, John himself says, "This child has done worlds for me"—and he shows it. We have all had to revise our notions of Elaine Jacobs Barrie Barrymore far upward. Give her credit, girls!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I tottered into a few mighty nice parties during the last week or two, but by far the nicest was the biggest. That was the Henry Street Settlement House holiday affair, far down on the East Side. A great and gracious woman and artist was its star—no less a personage than Kirsten Flagstad, the great soprano of the Met. The diva sang for the children, playing her own accompaniments, and then played Santa Claus, passing out gifts to the kids with ner own hands. It was a rich experience—how glad I am I didn't miss it!

* * * *

Is there a town in the United States in which this newspaper headline did not appear: "Spirit of Yule Possesses City?" If so, it's name is not New York.

* * * *

Speaking again for a moment of Jawn Barymore, he has had several nice long visits with Sister Ethel, who has emerged from her retirement to give one of her finest performances in years in "The Ghost of Yankee Doodle," Sidney Howard's play.

* * * *

I asked a news photographer friend of mine recently who was his most reluctant subject, and, much to my surprise, he told me it was John Hay Whitney, better known to fame as "Jock." This was a great surprise to me, as I should have guessed Mrs. Vincent Astor, who is as retiring as she is busy and charming.

* * * *

Checking the best-seller lists, I find that A. J. Cronin's novel, "The Citadel," has pushed ahead of Kenneth Roberts' "Northwest Passage" in a total of 53 cities. Well, they're both elegant books, as you undoubtedly know by now.

* * * *

Child's 'Whys' Require Reply, Insists Author

Parents Should Study Encyclopedia, Says Miss Hurlock.

IF YOUR CHILD is one who persistently asks, "Mother, what is this?" "How is it made?" "Who made it?" don't put him off with a frown or a noncommital reply, advises Elizabeth B. Hurlock in her new book, "Modern Ways With Babies," published by J. B. Lippincott.

In order to be prepared to answer the numerous questions children ask, the author suggests that parents study the encyclopedia. She says: "The answers should be as brief as possible and phrased in simple language that children can understand."

As to the problem of hiring nurses whose grammar might influence the child's speech, Miss Hurlong says:

"If you have to choose between an American-born servant who has an American accent, but makes many grammatical mistakes and uses slang frequently, or a foreign-born one who speaks with a foreign accent, I think you will do well to select the latter."

Make Few Errors.

"Foreigners generally learn to speak correctly," she continued, "and as a result, make few grammatical errors. Even though your baby may pick up an unfortunate accent from the nurse, do not allow this to disturb you unduly for it will not be difficult for him to lose it while he is still a baby."

Contrary to the general idea that children should be taught several languages with the native tounge, Miss Hurlong thinks no effort should be made in that direction during babyhood. She maintains that the best results from languages are obtained when begun in adolescence (generally between the ages of 12 and 15) according to the indication of psychological studies.

When it becomes necessary for a younger child to wear the clothes of an older brother or sister, the author advocates remodeling the old clothes so they will appear new. This can be done by dyeing, removing some of the decorations or ornaments and replacing them with new ones, or by adding some distinctive touch such as the child's initials.

As To Sleeping Habits.

To those mothers concerned with the baby's sleeping habits, Miss Hurlong says:

"No baby has to learn to sleep but the formation of correct sleeping habits must be learned. This is a home problem, entirely in the hands of parents and nurses, as the young baby cannot form good habits without guidance."

She further asserts that beginning with the second or third month the baby should begin to sleep throughout the night and the 10 o'clock feeding should be discontinued. She also indorses exercises for the young baby when recommended by the family pediatrician.

"And because the foundations of personality are laid so early in life," writes the author, "personality development is one of the most important problems you will have to meet during the babyhood years. Therefore, do not try to mold your child into a specific pattern, but develop good traits and eliminate undesirable ones."

Rooster Feathers, Vogue Years Ago, Stage Comeback

Paris (U.P.).—Cock feathers, which were fashionable hat trim earlier in the century, have come back on the scene as trim for evening gowns in the mid-season collection of Maggy-Rouff.

They make the entire bodice of an evening gown with romantic green organza skirt and, in lustrous deep green and bronze tones, form a diagonal panel for the skirt of another costume with which is carried a feather muff.

Today's HEALTH TALK

by Logan Clendening, M. D.

Infections of Nails.

In a large series of patients presenting abnormal conditions of the finger or toenails, the commonest ones were due to fungous infection, the second commonest due to infection of the nail bed with staphylococci or pus germs, and the next commonest due to eczema or psoriasis. So it will probably be most profitable, in a study of nail diseases, to consider these commonest manifestations.

The commonest form of fungous infection of the nail is that due to ringworm. This affects the nail alone and almost never the surrounding skin. It is always dry and affects one or several nails, but rarely all the nails of the fingers and toes. The nail is dry and lusterless and rough, having shed the greater part of its external layer of cells. It often shows striations and has a worm-eaten appearance. The nail is sometimes, but not often, entirely lost, but unless the progress of the conditions is stopped it is reduced to a dry, striated stump situated near the nail wall at the root.

When he sees nails with such an appearance, the physician should make shavings from the nail and after soaking these shavings in 40 per cent caustic potash solution, look for the threads of the fungus under the microscope.

Treatment of ringworm of the nails must be carried out with great patience because these infections do not yield readily.

Another form of infection is due to yeasts. These, different from the ringworm infections, are wet; there is a weeping exudation, and also the skin around the nail is likely to be involved. Housewives, dishwashers and washerwomen are particularly likely to be involved for natural reasons.

Simple pus infection of the skin around the nail—paronychia—is the second commonest form of nail infection. It can be seen on examination of such a nail that the skin is involved first and the nail only secondarily. There is redness of the skin, and on pressure it is almost always possible to squeeze out a little pus from around and under the skin edges. Injury, as with splinters, is usually the real origin.

Treatment with various antiseptics is the best. Wet saturated boric acid dressings, in the acute stage, usually clear these disagreeable affairs up and prevent unsightly deformities.

Manicurists should be trained to be on the lookout for these infections and especially to use sterilized instruments before and after contact with them. In fact, too hearty manicuring is often the cause of the last named type—paronychia.

Pioneer Fur Caps Are Copied in Paris

New Women's Styles Suggest Daniel Boone.

Paris (U.P.).—The idea of fur hats may be vaguely reminiscent of Daniel Boone, but it is a far cry from the pioneer's coonskin cap to those presented by Paris designers who have made some of their most attractive hats for the winter of furs to match coats and coat trims.

Of pillbox type or towering to peaks resembling modified dunce caps, the 1937 version of the fur hat is shown in beaver, Persian lamb or flat, silky furs.

Hats in general are more important this year than for many seasons past. The mode makes the hat an integral part of each costume so that a woman cannot get by with one or two good-looking "all-around" hats if she would be smart.

New Year's Eve a Good Time To Display Your New Coiffure

Escort May Be Startled by Adornment; Present Mode Runs to Huge Birds, Flowers and Ostrich Plumes.

By Ethel Ehlen

The Post's Fashion Editor.

NEW YEAR'S EVE is a wonderful time to go completely haywire in your coiffure and startle your escort by wearing amusing or unipue hair ornaments to accent your gown. Scarcely anyone has ventured forth in evening clothes this winter without an ornament of some kind to dramatize the new upsweeping hair-do, but as the season advances these gadgets are getting giddy, gay and of enormous proportions. With a bit of ingenuity one can easily create a distinctive hair ornament by assembling a number of the ornaments, flowers and the like available in the stores.

A bird in the hair is considered smarter than two in the hat for midseason dramatics; in white and colors they vary in sizes to harmonize with the coiffure. Aigrets are back in style, but modernized completely in their arrangements, and sometimes combined with small posies for youthful effects. Miniature ostrich plumes in monotone or tricolor themes arranged on small combs or narrow bandeaux of velvet are clever and chic to accent evening gowns of any styling.

Dramatice Flowers.

Flowers, both fresh and artificial, are always lovely to adorn the evening coiffure, but to be smart they must show some imagination, both in their choice and arrangement. Calla lilies are dramatic and lend a regal touch to the ensemble; several may be placed directly on top near the forehead. Black velvet calla lilies on a narrow band and perched flat on one side of the head are new and smart to wear with simple black dinner clothes. Carnations, especially the bright red and white ones, are much to the fore as hair decorative mediums, either placed separately amid the curls on top of the head, or arranged in perky little old-fashioned bouquets on one side of the coiffure.

Medieval-influenced hair ornaments of high conical shapes, made of gold or silver cloth or braid and decorated with simulated jewels, some of them dangling from the top, are daring and ideal for New Year's Eve. For further dramatics, long flowing veils may be worn atop these odd hair ornaments. Bright-colored velvet morning glories wired and piled high on the head are the ultimate in sophisticated hair decoration. If you want to concentrate on the coiffure rather than the ornaments, choose an extreme hair-do and add jeweled clips, blown glass flowers and small feathers, intermingled with the curls.

Rhinestone Halos.

Coronets, tiaras, halos, made of rows and rows of rhinestones or sequins are being worn again. They are equally smart to accent formal or dinner clothes. Sophisticates deem it more chic to tilt hairdresses of this type to one side of the head rather than straight across in the conventional manner—a Duchess of Windsor influence. A pouff of tulle floating from two sides of an enormous bow of ribbon or velvet is smartly individual when wearing semi-formal dinner suits. Small flowers in nosegay effects trimmed with borders of wired lace are lovely as hair decoration (worn atop or at one side of head), to complement quaint, off-the-shoulder gowns.

Corsages have definitely gone to the head, s odon't make the mistake of pinning a New Year's gift corsage to your shoulder or bosom of your gown—tie it or clip it to your coiffure. This applies whether the flowers happen to be orchids, gardenias, roses, spring flowers or arrangements of violets and valley lilies. Sequin flowers are still appearing atop smart heads.

Good Manners for Formals

A BIG FORMAL! Eve's charmingly at ease—unlike poor Kay who, everybody sees, doesn't know what to do from one minute to the next.

Yet poise at formal affairs is as simple as poise at informal affairs. It's all in knowing the right thing ahead of time—of brushing up on etiquette suited to each occasion.

At a large program dance, your escort finds partners for you and writes their names on your card. As some of them may be men you've never met, be easy to find between dances, so your partners may be presented without awkward delays and wall-flower minutes for you.

Cut-ins? Correct only in the encores—and what a test they are of the impression you've made.

Should you accept Jack's bid to dance when you're sitting one out with Bill? No, that's poor manners at any kind of dance. But when you're dancing at informal parties where cut-ins are good form, you don't refuse anyone who asks you, no matter how marvelous your partner may be.

Or perhaps you're invited to a big dinner. Talk to those on either side of you, don't aim remarks at the table in general. At a formal luncheon, leave about a half hour after the meal is over. At a tea or reception, you're expected to stay a little less than an hour.

And remember, though there's less glitter about them, little everyday incidents are a test of your breeding, too.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN YOU lose your sweet disposition on a reducing diet, take it as a warning. You are not getting your minerals and vitamins when your nerves snarl up and you want to snap at people. Sooner or later such an inadequate diet will have its effect on your health.

Your disposition is a fairly accurate gauge of your well-being. The battle to stay slim should not affect your disposition, and any program that makes you cantankerous is dangerous. The balanced diet safeguards your health and your disposition.

In the balanced menu the important minerals, vitamins and protein are supplied in normal amounts, so that although your weight is lowered, there are no ill effects. There should never be any reduction in these food essentials. The calorie cut is restricted to sugars and starches.

Reducer Needs Milk.

You will notice that in the daily menus, the protein content forms a considerable portion of the calorie intake. You need adequate protein daily for the repair of body tissue and this element has the happy faculty—for the reduces—of stimulating the metabolism to a slightly higher calorie utilization. You should have a large serving of lean meat, fish or fowl once a day, or a small serving twice a day. You also need one egg or a serving of cottage cheese, which supplies protein and calcium.

Whether or not you believe it, the reducer needs milk. Take one pint of skimmed or buttermilk. The milk may be in liquid form or combined with other food.

Adequate Protein Essential to Health: Milk Is Helpful.

Use whole grain breads for Vitamin B. It has been found that whole grain bread supplies about fifteen times as much of this vitamin as white bread.

Fresh fruits have a very important place in the reducer's diet. Have two fresh fruits daily, one a citrous fruit or tomato juice for Vitamin C. Avoid the fruits high in calories, such as raisins, figs, prunes, dates, avocados, etc.

You must have your vegetables. The rule is two or more cooked vegetables. You may also, if your calorie allowance permits, have one potato daily. Potatoes are not nearly as fattening as reputed, and they are filling and high in alkaline salts. If on a strict diet, avoid the high calorie vegetables: peas, canned corn, sweet potatoes, navy beans.

All raw vegetables may be used in liberal quantities. They are bulky, low in calories and high in minerals.

menus that follow these food principles you will find reducing easy on the disposition, and the valid reason is that you are not putting a strain on your vitality. You can have all the food you need while reducing—all the food you need to keep well and cheerful.

Debutantes Steal Show As Two Girls Make Bows

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Debutantes ran away with the social spotlight yesterday. Dinners, dances and teas were centered around them all over town. Two bonnie buds made their formal bows, and many others who have already been presented were on hand to enjoy the merrymaking.

Miss Marjorie Gould Lincoln, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gould Lincoln, was introduced to society at a dance given by Dr. and Mrs. A. Camp Stanley at their home on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Stanley is Miss Lincoln's godmother.

HOPE R. MILLER

The spacious rooms of the Stanley home were decorated in holly wreathes, roses, chrysanthemums and a towering fir tree, trimmed in the season's traditional ornaments.

Receiving with Dr. and Mrs. Stanley were Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln and the debutante, who wore a frock of aqua tulle and lace, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a billowing skirt. Her bouquet of roses and gardenias was exchanged later in the evening for a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Stanley wore a gown of gold lame, cut on simple lines, and Mrs. Lincoln chose a costume of silver lame.

Almost 200 guests arrived around 10 o'clock to enjoy the dancing, the punch, ice cream and dainty cakes served throughout the evening in the dining room, and the supper in the recreation room at midnight.

Several Debutantes Assist Guest of Honor

Assisting the debutante were Miss Dudley Gregory, Miss Patricia Griffin, Miss Aileen Harris, Miss Marian Kirk, Miss Letitia Knox, Miss Helen Lippitt, the Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, the Misses Elizabeth and Henrietta Nash.

Also, Miss Alexandrine Rowan, Miss Elizabeth Sabine, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, Miss Agnes Tawresey, Miss Jane Acheson, Miss Barbara Bradley, Miss Florence Ward Cauthen, Miss Edith Beadall, Miss Mary Wilson, Miss Ethel Worthington, Miss Juliet Dulany, Miss Martha McKenna, Miss Mary Whiteley and Miss Rose Hyde.

On the floor committee were Stephen C. Rowan, jr., John Stanley, Vandergift Lee, Richard Bolling, Bayard Underwood, Nathan Lincoln, the debutante's brother, John W. Davidge, jr., Frank G. Sterrett, Edward Shippen, Bowdoin Craighill, Jack Beardall, Howell Walker, Stanley Huntington and Robert Carsons.

Before the dance two dinners were given, hostesses later taking their guests on to the debut party. Miss Martha McKenna entertained at a small dinner at her home. Miss Lincoln was guest of honor at a dinner for 20-odd guests given by Mr. and Mrs. Richard Whiteley and Miss Mary Whiteley.

The Misses Meem Are Honored at Dinner

Meanwhile, another dinner for debs was being given by Mrs. Bessie Edson at her apartment in the Shoreham. Guests of honor were the Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem. The hostess was assisted by her son, Gilbert Edison, who is home for the holidays from the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn.

The honored guests, who always dress alike, chose for last evening's parties frocks of red crepe with the fullness of the skirts gathered to the front with gold ornaments at the waistlines. Gold sandals completed their costumes.

Miss Regina McKeever Presented at Tea Dance

Traditions of the holiday season in "olde Marylande" were carried out yesterday at a tea dance at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. McKeever on the Brookville road when their daughter, Miss Regina McKeever made her debut.

Guests who took to their automobiles for a few hours in the country—thereby escaping the hectic holiday rush in town, were enthusiastic over the buffet table laden with Maryland ham, succulent turkey and a huge bowl brimming with creamy eggnogg.

Even more enthusiastic were they over the debutante herself, who received her guests looking very much as if she had stepped out of a lovely old-fashioned painting. Her picturesque period gown was one that had been in the family for more than 100 years. Of yellow brocade, festooned with pink roses, it was fashioned with a fitted bodice, puffed sleeves and a bouffant skirt with a train. Her colonial bouquet was made of roses and pink sweet peas.

Mrs. McKeever, who received with her daughter, wore Eleanor blue satin with a fitted jacket. Her corsage was of Cymbidium orchids. Among the girls assisting the debutante were Miss Anne Mahoney, Miss Rosemary Newman, Miss Florence Cauthen, Miss Betty Burton, Miss Eleene Register, of Atlanta, Ga.; Miss Jean McCandlish, Miss Doris Goss and Miss Mary Agnes Young. With Mrs. McKeever at the tea table were Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith and Miss Helen Hurley.

In the drawing room, dancing was the order of entertainment as the orchestra played for the party. After the tea, Miss McKeever and her house guest, Miss Register, were guests at a dinner given by Miss Margaret Sampson in honor of Miss Betty Burton. This event took place at the Army and Navy Club.

Their gowns of copper slipper satin were made in the same style as Miss Nalle's, and their bouquets were fashioned of the same flowers as hers.

The bridegroom's attendants included Lieut. Victor Mansfield, who served as best man; Lieut. Charles Walker, brother of the bride; Lieut. Thomas Truxtun, Lieut. Asher Robbins, Lieut. Charles Hines, Lieut. David Parker and Lieut. A. W. Overbeck.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

THERE are those who shudder at modern art, but members of the Washington Junior League are definitely not among them. With a preview Sunday of contemporary paintings by John C. Pellew, Robert W. Blinn and Louis Bosa, the league is launching a campaign to increase interest in the modern school.

Members of this group should know their stuff when it comes to staging exhibits, as many of them are artists, amateur photographers, or sculptors. Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, finds time to paint a landscape occasionally, in between social engagements and looking fater her husband and three young ones. Mrs. David Finley sculps and Mrs. Eugene Roberts, Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Supreme Court Justice and Mrs. Roberts, and Mrs. Marius Farioletti are among the painters.

The sizable photography group within the league has lost its mentor, Miss Marvin Breckinridge, who now lives in New York, but they continue to carry on although she is no longer here to teach them the intricacies of the candid camera. Among the picture snapping enthusiasts are Mrs. David Karrick, president of the league's art committee; Miss Elizabeth Houghton, daughter of Alanson Houghton, former envoy to Great Britain; Miss Anne Carter Greene, and Miss Marion Shouse. Their favorite camera subject is travel landscapes, and as most of them have many opportunities to travel, their collections are sizable. Mrs. Karrick brought back some excellent pictures from a recent trip to Mexico.

A BEAU GESTE of the first order is the concert to be given on the afternoon of January 20 in honor of shy and unassuming Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, internationally known as a patron of chamber music. As a mark of their appreciation of all she has done in the music line, 30 well-known Washingtonians who sponsor her concerts are arranging for the appearance of the Pro-Arts Quartet of Brussels at the beautiful Folger Shakespeare Library.

Builder of a special auditorium in the Library of Congress and originator of the Coolidge Foundation, the guest of honor at this event has spent a large part of her fortune for concerts from which she realized not a penny. Since she gave her first chamber music concert 21 years ago in Pittsfield, Mass., Mrs. Coolidge has introduced to America string quartets which have since become famous.

When she comes to Washington for her series in the Library of Congress, Mrs. Coolidge lives unobtrusively at 2400 Sixteenth street. About five years ago she decided to give concerts for the benefit of university students both in the United States and Europe, and since then she has given 40 concerts in Belgium alone, to say nothing of her work at Yale, Harvard, Stanford, Duke, Dartmouth and Princeton.

AFTER SPENDING Christmas week-end with her brother in Wellesley Hills, Mass., Mrs. George Messersmith has gone to Wilmington or a brief stay with other relatives. Mr. Messersmith, who is Assistant Secretary of State, rushed back to Washington after spending Christmas with his mother in Pennsylvania.

Holidays for Assistant Secretaries of State were brief this year, as all of them have been, and still are, hard worked. They are generally down at the Department by 8:30 a. m., work until 7, and often go back Sundays. As one man expressed it, in speaking of a high-ranking member of the State Department, "He's so busy that he doesn't walk from one office to another; he dogtrots."

Hardest working of all is the Secretary, Cordell Hull. He is up and at it as early as 8 o'clock in the morning.

Wahl, became the bride of William Mark Dolan, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Dolan, of Deering, Conn. The Rev. Daniel V. McCauley officiated.

Miss O'Donnell Is Maid of Honor

Miss Mary Jane O'Donnell, who served as maid of honor, was attired in a frock of russet-rose faille. Her bouquet was of deep yellow calla lilies. The other bridesmaids were Miss Caroline Petit Byrns and Miss Ruth Quinn, who wore gowns of gold slipper satin. Junior attendants were Betty Lou Wahl, sister of the bride, and Patsy Lou Landdon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Distinguished alumnae of Smith College and Dr. Howard Meyerhoff, head of the Department of Geology there, were speakers at the luncheon given yesterday by the Smith Club of Washington, honoring undergraduates home for the holidays. The affair, at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, was attended by 60, including Mrs. Meyerhoff and Dr. Meyerhoff, the lone male among them.

All talks were limited to 4 minutes. Dr. Meyerhoff, who is consulting geologist of the Insular Bureau of Mines in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, spoke of the work of the Smith College geology department, rather than of his own interesting research.

Mrs. Morgan Talks On League of Nations

Mrs. Laura Puffer Morgan, who has just returned from Geneva, where she has been associated for the past six years with the National Council for the Prevention of War, spoke on the League of Nations.

Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, of Washington, a trustee of Smith and former president of the alumnae association, spoke of her geographical books for children. Mrs. Huntington is a member of the Society of Women Geographers and a daughter of the late Frank Carpenter, travel writer.

Another of the speakers was Mrs. Harold Vermilyea, formerly research assistant under the late Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, in the International Labor Office, who discussed labor's gains in recent years. Mrs. L. H. Greathouse, instructor in law at Washington College of Law, and former assistant United States attorney, talked on legal work for women, while Miss Dudley Harmon, writer and columnist for The Washington Post, discussed society reporting.

Miss Sylvia Meyer, a senior at Smith, told of the Junior Year in France, in which she participated last season, studying at Dijon and Sorbonne.

Mrs. Fred Libbey Presides at Luncheon

Mrs. Fred Libbey, president of the Smith Club, wearing a turquoise blue frock and a small black hat. In addition to the talks, there was a brief discussion of plans for the coming benefit performance of Martha Graham's dance group Friday, January 21, at the Rialto Theater. Mrs. Kenneth Holland is chairman of arrangements for the benefit, proceeds of which will be used for a scholarship at Smith for a Washington girl.

Among the guests were Miss Helen Stobe, instructor in the department of geology; Mrs. Emory Land, wife of Rear Admiral Land, acting chairman of the Maritime Commission, who wore black, with a sable scarf and a small black trimmed hat; Mrs. James M. Johnson; Miss Madeleine Evans, in green with matching hat; Mrs. Kenneth Holland, in red dress with gold belt and brown hat; Miss Patricia Bull and Miss Betty Bull, both undergraduates and no relation each other, despite their names; Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mrs. John Guider, Mrs. F. W. Lathrop, secretary of the club; Mrs. S. H. Rathbun, Mrs. W. P. Rayner, Mrs. P. Edgar Pearman, Mrs A. R. Reed, Mrs. J. R. Leake, Mrs. Carl Fenning, Miss Betty Beale, Mrs. Hugh D. Butler, Mrs. Robert Burgess, Mrs. R. C. Bowker, Miss Anna Carhart, Mrs. E. A. Back, Miss Helen Atwater, and Miss Sybil Smith.

Zeta Beta Tau Fetes Feature Conclave Here

Many social affairs are being arranged in connection with the thirty-ninth annual convention of Zeta Beta Tau Fraternity, now in session at the Mayflower Hotel. Four hundred members and their wives and daughters will attend parties which will be a feature of the conclave, continuing through Sunday.

David R. Simon, chairman of the local convention committee, and Henry King, president of the Washington alumni chapter of the fraternity, are directing plans for entertainment of visitors from all parts of the country. Herbert E. Steiner, of New York City, is president of the national organization.

There is also a woman's committee assisting in arrangements for social affairs, including Mrs. Theodore Peyser, Mrs. Simon, Mrs. Aubrey Harris, Mrs. Cecil Kaufman, Mrs. Jules Fogel, Mrs. Jerome Horwitz, Mrs. Maurice Rosenberg, jr., and Mrs. Justin Wolf.

This afternoon the round of entertaining will begin with a tea dance at the Mayflower, followed by a "diplomatic ball" tonight in the Hall of Nations ballroom of the Washington Hotel. This will be one of the most colorful events of the week-end. The international setting will include booths at which characteristic foods of different countries will be served so guests may dine in France, Russia, Italy or Mexico, according to their fancies.

Tomorrow night a New Year's eve ball will be held in the main ballroom of the Mayflower, and Saturday night a banquet at which Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will speak. It will be followed by a dance. Sunday, a luncheon and farewell cocktail party at Woodlawn Country Club will close the festivities.

Need of Women In Politics Told

The question "Why Go Into Politics?" is answered frankly by three women who have had successful careers themselves in the January issue of The Democratic Digest, published by the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, which is off the press today.

"To restore balance to a lop-sided world," says Caroline O'Day, Congresswoman-at-large from New York.

"To determine the kind of government which shall rule my world," declares Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint and former Governor of Wyoming.

"To learn how government can help in everyday living," states Ellen S. Woodward, Assistant Administrator of Works Progress Administration.

Mrs. O'Day feels that there are countless reasons why women should go into politics. "It is generally conceded that now-a-days women are people," she says, "and since all people live under some system of government and all systems of government are maintained through the political power of persons or of parties—the 'ins' and 'outs,' the 'haves' and the 'have nots'—it behooves women to do their part in seeing that this political power is used for the welfare of those subjected to it, and not for their exploitation.

It is the opinion of Mrs. Ross that women should go into politics because the government has either a direct or indirect bearing on the most vital interests in her life.

Mrs. Woodward, whose father, Senator William V. Sullivan, served in both houses of Congress, declares that very early in life she realized that politics—as the science of government—bore a direct relationship to the welfare of the home, community, State and national government.

P.-T. A. Is Praised By Mrs. Pettengill

The Parent-Teacher Associations throughout the country are making the home felt in every phase of life, in politics, in religion, in civics, in the building of the philosophy of the times, Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the National Parent-Teacher Congress, told her radio audience yesterday in one of the series of radio forums the organization is sponsoring. This broadcast, the final one of the year 1937, was on the subject, "Who Builds the World?"

"Children and adults alike step outside the walls of home, carrying with them the values, understanding and inspirations which have come from the homemaking within, Mrs. Pettengill asserted. "We all come forth from the doors of home to mould and recreate our social order—to build a world.

"The homes of yesterday were production units in which cooperation was essential, each member of the family sharing the load. But today, industry has taken over most of these activities. A highly commercialized society has replaced these home activities and instead the home today is a market for the world's production. With the shifting of the production power of the home to industries, there is another tendency of parents today—and that is to shift the responsibility for social and moral training to the schools. Schools do provide educational opportunity but they cannot provide the essential practical experience that home training affords."

Smith College Club Entertains Undergraduates

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE CONGRESSIONAL CLUB will appear in New Year's dress for the reception Saturday formally opening its social season. The annual young people's party will be held tomorrow night.

Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, president, has divided her time between holiday plans and overseeing the redecorating of the clubhouse on New Hampshire avenue. The walls and floors have been done over—the ballrom and lower hall in old ivory, and the library in green. New Venetian blinds have been added in the ballroom.

* * * *

The reception will begin at 4 p. m., with a tea dance from 5 to 8 p. m., for which the Marine Band Orchestra will play. Mrs. Reed will receive, assisted by Mrs. S. Otis Bland, first vice president; Mrs. Harry L. Engelbright, second vice president, and other members of the executive board. Club officers who are away for the holidays are Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, who is in Bermuda; Mrs. Karl Stefan, in Florida; Mrs. John E. Rankin, who is at her home in Mississippi; Mrs. Richard Duncan, at her home in Missouri, and Mrs. William Larrabbee, in Indiana.

* * * *

Mrs. Joseph Herbert jr., who is in charge of the young people's party, has nearly 100 reservations and more are coming in. Reservations must be made in advance, because it is a buffet supper. The Marine Band Orchestra also will play for the young people's dance, and among the guests will be students from Annapolis, West Point and other military academies.

THE LEAGUE OF REPUBLICAN WOMEN will barely let welcomes to the New Year quiet down before launching its work for 1938. It will hold its January meeting Monday at 2:30 p. m. in the Italian garden room of the Mayflower, with Miss Marion E. Martin, assistant to the chairman of the National Republican Committee in charge of women's activities, as the speaker. By this time, most of the Republican women in Washington have met Miss Martin and know that when she makes a speech it's worth going to hear.

Next Wednesday the league will hold open house at its clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street, with Mrs. Howard S. LeRoy, chairman of hostesses, in charge.

Mme. Cantaguzene, president of the league, who has been in the Middle West visiting her son and daughter, will return to preside at Monday's meeting.

* * * *

TONIGHT'S the night of the Maryland State Society's party—not quite a New Year's Eve celebration, but one which promises to be just as much fun. It will be given at the Kennedy-Warren.

* * * *

THE FOUR active members of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, will be the guests of honor New Year's Day at a reception to be given from 2 to 4 p. m. at the Thomas Circle Club by the Women's Relief Corps, of which Mrs. Mary E. Bowen is department president. The veterans expected to be present will be John M. Kline, department commander, John T. Ryan, William F. Dorsey and Charles Fox.

Receiving with Mrs. Bowen will be Mrs. Bertha Brown and Mrs. Hattie Canada, vice presidents; Mrs. Delia L. O'Brien, secretary; Mrs. E. Helen Temple, treasurer; Mrs. May S. Parker, chaplain; Mrs. Charlotte M. Cary, counselor, and other members of her staff.

DAUGHTERS OF UNION VETERANS, Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent, has invited members of all allied organizations and friends to the annual New Year reception in honor of the Department of the Potomac, Grand Army of the Republic, at Tent Headquarters, 1222 New Hampshire avenue, Saturday from 4 to 7 p. m.

Mrs. Brashears Plays Hostess To Ladies Guild

Mrs. Joseph Brashears was hostess to the Kenilworth Ladies Guild yesterday at its annual Christmas luncheon party, a holiday function for which she has opened her home to the guild members for 15 years.

The luncheon was served to 38 guests in the recreation room in the basement, which was decorated with greens and little lighted trees on the table. Mrs. Brashears became a member of the guild 24 years ago, two years after it was founded, and is now serving as its treasurer. Mrs. Harry Kent is its president.

The guest of honor and speaker yesterday was Mrs. McLeod Harvery, of Fredericksburg, Pa., wife of the Rev. Dr. Harvey, who was minister of the Kenilworth Presbyterian Church some years ago. Mrs. Harvey, who served as president of the guild for several years during her husband's pastorate here, told of the early years of the society. Its first president, Mrs. Grace Parent, who is still an active member, also was present at the luncheon. Another guest was Mrs. Margaret Spencer, of Baltimore, a former member, who came to Washington for the occasion.

Carol singing and games were the afternoon's entertainment, Mrs. Naomi Gibson won the clothespin game; Mrs. Harvey, the word contest, and Mrs. Mabel Cole, the chewing gum art game.

Navy Prepares Plans for Ten More Cruisers

That Many Additional Ships Envisaged in Some Quarters.

Addition of 10 or possibly 15 10,000-ton cruisers of the United States naval building program was envisaged in some quarters yesterday after it was reported the Navy Department had drafted a tentative program calling for such construction.

Navy Department officials also said January 19 had been set tentatively for the start of a mass flight of patrol planes from San Diego Calif., to Honolulu.

They declared a squadron of 12 bombers probably would undertake the nonstop flight of approximately 2,400 miles, and described the planes as replacements for aircraft now in service.

The exact date of the flight will depend upon weather conditions, it was explained, but no reason was given for advancing the tentative date from 'some time in February," as announced previously.

Armor Plate Bids Sought.

It also was learned that the Navy Department had opened bids for armor plate for its two new battleships, but officials refused to publish the figures immediately.

Bids were asked for armor for the North Carolina and the Washington, 35,000-ton dreadnaughts, which are expected to cost $60,000,000 each.

Meanwhile, naval officers disclosed that the armament of United States gunboats would be increased as a result of the Panay sinking.

Pointing to the fact that gunboats had been designed to protect American interests from bandits and pirates, they declared no particular thought had been given to providing defense from air attacks. As a result of the Panay incident, the Navy now believes antiaircraft equipment essential to gunboats in Chinese waters.

Would Cost $20,000,000.

Under the Navy's tentative building program, the projected cruisers would mount 6-inch guns and cost $20,000,000 or more each, it was said.

Support for increased naval expenditures was voiced yesterday by Representative J. G. Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, member of the Appropriations sub-committee on Naval Affairs. He proposed funds for additional trained Navy personnel, storage of strategic minerals, increased Marine Corps strength and additional airplanes.

Proposals for increased shipbuilding were considered certain to stir a bitter controversy in Congress. Larger naval appropriations drew strong support from Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but criticism from Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana. Pittman said an increased appropriation would be "the cheapest insurance on earth."

"We can strengthen our Navy with a few hundred millions of dollars so that any single nation will be afraid to force us into war," he added.

Wheeler declared:

"While I am for adequate national defense, there is no necessity for spending hundreds of millions of dollars for new battleships. . . .

"We ought to spend our money for irrigation, reclamation, flood control and road building to add to the capital assets of the Nation.

"The Administration will find out that the people of this country are not war-minded and are against large expenditures of public money for battleships and munitions."

Japanese Launch Ship.

Kure, Japan, Dec. 29 (AP).—A new Japanese aircraft tender, the Soryu, with a displacement of 10,000 tons and a speed of 30 knots, was launched today.

Vase by Exekias, Famous Potter, Found at Athens

Philadelphia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Archeologists excavating near the Acropolis at Athens have discovered a vase by Exekias, famed Greek potter of the sixth century, B. C., Dr. Oscar Broneer, of the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, told the Archeological Institute of America today.

Dr. Broneer classed the vase as one of the five greatest found by archeologists.

Part of the vase, buried with other pottery and bronze in a well 60 feet deep near the Acropolis, is missing. It depicted the introduction of Hercules into Olympus, figures of the Grecian deities, a battle between three Greeks and three Trojans over the body of Patroklos and an attack by two lions on a bull.

Utility Strike Ends in Paris as Army Is Called

temps might be overthrown as a result of the strikes, ecause army and navy detachments were called out to take over utilities services to prevent hardships to the populace.

The strike was the gravest in a series of labor tieups that have plagued France during the last two years, and had the support of the powerful French Communist Party.

Transportation Paralyzed.

Chautemps hinted that political motives lay behind it.

The walkouts completely paralyzed all transportation facilities except taxicabs; crippled water, gas and electric facilities, closed hospitals, temporarily; left streets unswept and garbage uncollected and even closed undertaking establishments.

Mobile guards stood at the entrances to "Metro" subway stations. The Paris military garrison was confined to its barracks. Guards specially trained for rioting and strike disorders moved in from provincial districts.

Police evacuated sit down strikers from all but three bus garages.

The walkout was called for two reasons:

1—The workers' demands for a 100-franc ($3.39) monthly indemnity to meet the increased cost of living, instead of a 50-franc ($1.70) grant given them.

2—Protests against the government's use of military trucks to transport food supplies to markets as a means of offsetting the week-long strike of truck drivers which still is in progress.

Jewish Physicians Barred From Nazi Insurance Boards

Berlin, Dec. 29 (AP).—Jewish physicians were deprived of an important source of revenue today when they were barred from private insurance company boards.

Although Jewish doctors already had been ousted from state insurance company lists, those who fought in the World War or were registered as physicians before 1914 still were permitted to accept aryan patients insured by private concerns.

Because of anti-Semitic measures, Jewish doctors and dentists have been leaving Germany in increasing numbers.

Quezon Selects Tagalog Dialect For Philippines

Manila, Dec. 29 (AP).—The Tagalog dialect will be proclaimed the national language of Filipinos by President Manuel L. Quezon tomorrow.

The proclamation will be part of the celebration of the forty-first anniversary of the killing of the famous revolutionary patriot, Dr. Jose Rizal, by the Spaniards in their regime.

English and Spanish will continue to be the official languages.

Approximately 7,000,000 Filipinos speak Tagalog, a dialect influenced greatly by the Spanish, Chinese and English languages.

CCC Applications.

Applicants for CCC camps in Prince Georges County will be registered at the office of the board of public welfare, Hyattsville, Md., immediately, it was announced yesterday by Miss Lydia Eicher, welfare secretary. Enrollment of the new members will be January 5.

Rebel Column Storms Teruel Defense Lines

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 29.—Spanish insurgent military dispatches today said a column under Gen. Miguel Aranda was storming government trenches around Teruel in a campaign to retake the provincial capital.

Within the city, still holding out after more than a week of fighting, an insurgent garrison of 3,000 men and an equal number of civilians held to two stout-walled strongholds. The insurgent column was reported attacking the flanks of the government forces, who dug six parallel lines of trenches to defend the city.

Government advices, meanwhile, reported the clean-up of Teruel was progressing.

(Madrid dispatches said government troops checked several insurgent attempts to break through the lines around the city. The dispatches also reported that improved weather conditions in the Upper Aragon permitted resumption of military activity all along the battle front from Huesca, 40 miles northeast of Zaragoza, south to Teruel.)

Mrs. Thomas Dixon Dies.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 29 (AP).—Mrs. Thomas Dixon, wife of the author and playwright, who is now clerk of the Federal District Court of Eastern North Carolina, died at a hospital today.

Hundreds Vexed As Road Cancels Train Collision

Hopkinsville, Ky., Dec. 25 (AP).—Hundreds of spectators displayed disappointment today when Louisville & Nashville Railroad officials, investigating the cause of the Christmas Eve wreck here with a 12-car train, did not produce a test collision.

Officials were bombarded with such questions as "when will the trains run together?"

"Shucks," said a woman spectator when informed there would be no collision, "I wouldn't have come if I'd known that."

Earle Establishes Speeders' Courts

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 29 (AP).—Special speeders' courts with "no favorites" were ordered established today by Gov. George H. Earle in a new move to reduce automobile fatalities in Pennsylvania.

Thirteen tribunals, supervised by the department of revenue, will start January 2 suspending or revoking licenses of all who break the State's new 50-mile speed-limit law.

Alarmed by the mounting highway death toll which is nearing an all-time high of 2,700, the Governor warned several days ago that licenses of automobile speeders would be suspended for 90 days beginning with the new year.

Paper Plant Boosts Pay.

Millinocket, Me., Dec. 29 (AP).—The Great Northern Paper Co. today announced wage increases to more than 1,000 employes in its three Maine mills under a union agreement. The increases will not affect salaried employes.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

It's a shame to mention it during the holidays, when eggnogs and Tom and Jerrys help people forget their troubles, but it's true, nevertheless, that sad-faced Congressmen expect to slap higher income taxes on people who earn $5,000 to $15,000 a year, including themselves.

* * * *

Quite a few Congressmen tell me they'd slap heavier taxes on people who earn less than $5,000, and on millions who haven't ever paid any income tax at all . . . But it's an election year; almost every year is an election year.

* * * *

Vryly, they seem to have accepted the truth that it's out of the question to drape heavier income taxes on the wealthier people, with incomes above $15,000, who have been yelling bloody murder. And the $5,000 to $15,000 group dont cast enough votes to swing an election.

This marks an important milestone in the leveling process. The next dose of leveling will come in the middle. People who earn $30,000 or $50,000 or $80,000 or more are to be let alone for the time being, while those with $5,000 to $15,000 a year are ordered front and center.

* * * *

Superficially, it might seem that a gentleman with $75,000 left after all taxes could afford to pay another $5,000 a year more easily than one with $10,000 a year can pay another $500 a year; this would seem to be logical.

* * * *

But right there is where two of Washington's favorite words—"logical" and "realistic"—collide with tremendous force, though many seem to think they mean the same thing. Logically, you'd expect the $75,000 man to be happier and more comfortable on $70,000 than his $10,000 cousin on $9,500.

* * * *

But realistically the Congressmen seem to be persuaded that not much more can be milked from the wealthy bigshots in income taxes, without hurting "business," while the merely well-to-do citizens, because there are so many more of them, can really be socked into anteing up sums that will add up to substantial totals, without suffering strokes of apoplexy.

* * * *

Nine out of ten members I talked with are in favor, off the record, of a $10 to $20 tax on every American who earns $800 or $1,000 a year, partly to give 'em a taste of taxes and partly because several hundred millions could be raised from about 20,000,000 Americans with incomes up to $3,500, who now pay no income tax. But never in an election year, nor a pre-election year; that is to say, never.

"—some want it painless."

Such taxes, they think, would cost more to collect and audit than they would realize. . . . So most of them are privately in favor of pay roll or gross income taxes collected at the source, because they could be collected more economically and more painlessly.

* * * *

A hard-boiled minority, however, want the $10 tax from a $1,000 income collected as painfully as possible; that is to say, in a lump sum just when another installment is due on the furniture or mortgage. They feel that the humble citizen's awareness of his taxes is more valuable to the republic than the amount he forks over.

* * * *

There's another small group, at the opposite extreme, that would like to eliminate as much as possible of the poisonous agony that bubbles up just before March 15, when people struggle with their income tax returns. They argue that people wouldn't mind paying more tax if it weren't extracted in such a painful manner.

* * * *

Finally, there's still an amazing amount of sentiment in favor of a national sales tax, which would be felt by the payer and yet not be so painful as scratching for a lump sum once a year . . . If no member of Congress were running for re-election in 1938 a sales tax bill could be passed by a 3-to-1 vote in the House.

* * * *

Well, most of this is in the realm of logic, rather than realism; the realm of logic, which is situated in the land of make-believe. . . Realistically, this is just a reminder to the $10,000 a year man and his close neighbors in the salary lists to begin to put by a few hundred dollars for more taxes.

Science Gets Earth Clews From Quakes

The only direct pathway to the interior of the earth and what it may contain is furnished by earthquakes, Dr. A. L. Day, newly elected president of the Geological Society of America and recently retired director of the geophysical laboratory of the Carnegie Institution, told the fiftieth meeting of the society yesterday.

"The maor undeveloped source of geological history," Dr. Day told more than 800 delegates to the three-day session at the Washington Hotel, "is the deep, substrata, where mountains are born, lava flows start and earthquakes themselves begin."

This inner earth, Dr. Day asserted, may tell science how the geological composition of the globe came to be as it is, and reveal innumerable secrets of science locked deep within the world.

Urges Measurement.

Dr. Day proposed that the measurement of earthquake tremors be used to determine what the substrata is made of. He stated that, by finding out how fast an earthquake travels through rock formation, geologists determine the very nature of the rocks themselves.

Geologists were urged to use similar methods to find out about the bottom of the oceans by Dr. T. A. Vaughan, former director of the Scripps Institute of Oceanography. He recommended that the scientists pursue their study of mintue animal remains in ocean rocks and mud, which would furnish clews as to conditions when the various structures were formed.

"Finding out what kind of life existed then," he said, "the temperatures, food growths and surrounding conditions can be determined."

A scale for judging coal, so that consumers throughout the Nation, from householders to the operators of vast manufacturing plants, could tell the heating value of the coal they bought, was presented by Dr. T. A. Hendricks, of the United States Geological Survey.

"With this scale," he asserted, "it would be possible to tell the character of coal from any mine by making an analysis.

"Most large consumers of coal already are using the scale," he continued. The scale to which he referred was worked out by a committee representing coal producers, consumers and Government experts.

Further study of the movement of heated waters which move minerals here and there beneath the surface of the globe was urged by Dr. Norman L. Bowen, of the University of Chicago. Dr. Bowen pointed out that a major problem confronting science was how minerals change from the state of molten rock to the state in which they are propelled by heated water.

"Streams of water," he said, "have the power to remove many minerals that come their way, and replace them with others."

Gets Roebling Medal.

Dr. Charles Palache, of Harvard University, retiring president of the Geological Society, yesterday was presented with the Roebling Medal for "meritorious achievement in mineralogy and allied sciences."

Presentation took place at the annual luncheon of the Mineralogical Society of America at the Washington Hotel. Dean Edward H. Kraus, of the College of Letters and Sciences at the University of Michigan and former head of the Department of Mineralogy at that university, made the presentation.

The medal was awarded for the first time by the Mineralogical Society, and is named for the late Col. Washington A. Roebling, of Trenton, N. J., engineer of the Brooklyn Bridge, who built up his own collection of 16,000 mineral specimens.

Development of the world's petroleum resources would be greatly aided by a freer exchange of information among the scientific staffs of the companies engaged in that industry, Dr. Joseph A. Cushman asserted yesterday morning in his presidential address before the Paleontological Society of America, in joint session with the Geological Society, the Mineralogical Society and the Society of Economic Geologists. Dr. Cushman is retiring president of his group.

Dr. Cushman recommended the distribution of collections of fossils among individuals and societies, emphasizing the educational importance of establishing museums, where the public might see groups of the fauna of the various geologic ages in relation to one another and their environment.

Women geologists and wives of the members of the societies attending the sessions yesterday visited the White House, where they were greeted by Mrs. Sarah Delano Roosevelt, the President's mother, and Mrs. James Roosevelt, his daughter-in-law.

Mrs. Roosevelt had planned to be present, but was in Chicago on her way home after visiting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. John Boettiger.

'Other Wise Man' Finale Tonight

"The Other Wise Man" tonight will have its last presentation this season at the Luther Place Memorial Church, Fourteenth and N streets northwest.

Doors will open at 7:15 p. m. The opening song of the drama, the French carol "Draw Nigh, Emmanuel," will be sung by Christine Irish, soprano. A choral service by the Fifth Baptist Choir will begin the service at 7:30 p. m.

Science Greats Lampooned in Geological Society Skits

Serious Geologists Go Insane For One Night of Merriment

500 at Convention Go Overboard in Vain (But Merry) Hunt for 'Mineralisia,' an Isle in Never-Never Land.

The serious works and papers of the Geological Society of America surrendered to ar empire of mirth last night as more than 500 geologists attending the fiftieth annual meeting here rocked with laughter at the trials of the mythical island of Mineralisia.

In the South Seas of Never-Never Land, the island was the setting for the annual "gridiron" opera of the Pick and Hammer Club, composed of Washington geologists, who lampooned the great and near-great of the geological fraternity in a musical comedy burlesque in the Roosevelt High School auditorium.

Title of the play was "I'd Rather Be Bright," and the program was issued under the name of "The Geolaphical Society of America."

"We sail the ocean blue," sang the passengers aboard a ship of geologists en route to Mineralisia to study and improve lives of natives there.

"We sail the ocean blue,
And sample all the oozes.
We're sober men and true,
Though our ship well stocked with booze is;
And the beer flows free
Here's health to Prexy Day—"

Then a character representing Dr. Arthur L. Day, new president of the society, appeared upon the stage.

"I'm always glad to state
How the gases emanate,
From the depths of a volcano;
My listeners may quail,
But I tell in great detail,
For there's nothing I don't know," replied Day.

Their numbers jested good-naturedly last night at such noted scientists as Dr. Bailey Willis, professor emeritus of Stanford University; Andrew Lawson, professor emeritus of the University of California and geological consultant on the recently completed San Francisco Bridge; Dr. Charles P. Berkey, of Columbia, secretary of the Geological Society, geological adviser in the construction of the Grand Coulee Dam and Holland Tunnel.

This year's production was written largely by G. F. Loughlin, chief geologist of the U. S. Geological Survey. Meters and melodies were largely borrowed from Gilbert and Sullivan.

Few members of the society were immune from the biting satire last night, but no one minded as the little "gridiron affair" progressed.

Johns Hopkins University did not escape the barrage of fun. In staid garments a quartet sang:

"If import goods you most adore,
Try Hopkins U. at Baltimore.
You'll find a line at Bowman's store,
J. Hopkins School in Baltimore,
The best from Europe at your door—
At Hopkins U. in Baltimore."

There was no settling of the problems of Mineralisia, because the views held by the scientists were so diverse a hodge-podge resulted.

The curtain descended at "Dead End," with the actors chanting:

"Behold us all while now you may,
The islanders of GSA,
That will not flit before tomorrow,
Well, anyway, in fun 'twas meant,
By us upon the Isle of Mineralisia."

Girl 'Lost' in Zoo, Family and Police Engage in Search

Audrey Cole, 8-year-old third-grade student, had a good time at the Zoo for a while yesterday, but her eight-hour absence resulted in a police lookout and considerable consternation at home.

Audrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cole, went for a walk with Eleanor Snodgrass, 10, a friend. They walked through the Zoo for a while and then Eleanor went into the Mammal House. Audrey didn't want to go.

Instead, she went around and watched the antics of the seals and alligators. When she couldn't find her way back she asked a policeman to direct her to the home of a friend at Sixteenth and U streets northwest. The friend sent Audrey home in a taxicab.

Wilson College Alumni Celebrate

Anne Goding, then principal, was one of the honored guests. Louise Frazier, chairman of the committee on arrangements, was hostess. She was assisted by Rose Wildman, Helen Mulalley, Elizabeth Griffith and Harriet Edelin.

Ribbon awards were presented to members of the class who had achieved parenthood and to those who had received bachelor degrees.

Bandits Kidnap Motorist Near Union Station

Pair Ties Marylander to Tree, Robs Him of $7; Grocery Held Up.

A man was forced to drive through city streets to a secluded spot, where two colored men tied him to a tree and robbed him of $7 and his automobile; three stores were held up and three suspects identified in a police line-up last night

Henry Graff, 1582 East-West highway, Silver Spring, Md., said two colored men forced their way into his car near Union Station and ordered him to drive to Second street, and Chesapeake avenue. After tying him to a tree, they took $7 from his pocket and escaped in his car.

Grocery Held Up.

A few minutes later, a grocery store at Second street and Rhode Island avenue northwest was held up by a colored bandit and robbed of $78. Samuel Koenick, proprietor, said the man apparently was intoxicated.

Pair Frightened Off.

Two colored men, believed to be the same linked with the other robberies, were scared off before they could get any loot when Nathan Mennick, proprietor of a grocery store at 626 Fourth street northeast, pulled his gun.

Another suspect—Arthur Knox, 32, of the 400 block D street southwest—was identified by Ray Tippett, a cab driver, as having held him up.

Brown Opposes Police Canvass For Evaders of Privilege Tax

Commissioner Hazen Also Disapproves Seal's Suggestion to Uncover 2,000 Reported Operating Without Licenses.

A recommendation that Washington policemen canvass their beats for business and professional persons operating without a license was disapproved yesterday by both Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal had recommended this procedure to the Commissioners when he was informed that more than 2,000 persons in the District were operating without a license or had failed to file a return on their gross receipts.

It was pointed out in a report to the Commissioners that one policeman might spend two weeks canvassing a large office building.

Commissioner Hazen agreed with the report by Maj. Brown, but added that perhaps "a compromise situation where patrolmen could canvass small businesses might be worked out."

Recently District businessmen have written to the corporation counsel complaining of competitors who were in business without a license. They were reluctant to specify the persons, but wanted the District to correct the situation.

It was pointed out by the corporation counsel's office that those persons who have failed to file returns on their gross receipts were liable to a fine of $100 for each day after the deadline, which was November 16.

District officials said they relied on individuals in business or a profession to file these returns, but have had to resort to "threatening measures" recently to bring a comparatively few violators "into line."

Jury Will Investigate Shooting of Policeman

Jack D. Cooper, 18, of the 1200 block Fifteenth street northwest, who police said admitted firing the shot, will appear at the inquiry. Yesterday, Cooper, who was at liberty on $2,000 bail until Gorman's death, appeared voluntarily at police headquarters with his mother and father.

Worker's Pay Snatched.

Waldorf M. Brooks, 1633 C street southeast, went home last night a sad man. His week's salary, $20 had been snatched from his grasp by a colored man who fled. He is employed by the District Refuse Department at the incinerator, Thirty-first and South streets northwest.

Committee Will Report Recommendations to Board Today.

A general sales tax not to exceed 2 per cent and an income tax levy of 1 per cent will be recommended to the District Commissioners today by the District Tax Advisory Committee, as was disclosed by The Post last week, it was learned last night.

In addition, it was learned that the committee would recommend that the District Commissioners ask Congress for an additional Federal contribution to the District.

The committee would not, however, recommend the repeal of the intangible property tax, it was disclosed.

The District Commissioners will study the report of the Tax Advisory Committee and the one submitted by the Citizens Tax Advisory Committee, earlier this month, before making their recommendations to Congress for a permanent tax system for the District.

The citizens' committee advocated a general sales tax for the District and an additional Federal contribution. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen already has been quoted as favoring a sales tax.

It was estimated that the intangible property tax would raise about $2,500,000 annually. Further estimates, although unofficial, placed the revenue which would be raised by the 1 per cent tax at $1,000,000.

Labor Opposed To U.S. Control, A.F.L. Aide Says

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 29.—Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, declared today that labor was "unalterably opposed" to Federal control of labor relations and that it was "inevitable" that the Wagner act would have to be amended to clarify the rights of both labor and the National Labor Relations Board.

Speaking before the American Political Science Association, Woll asserted the function of government was to serve in the role of umpire and to help make the rules of the game, but nev - to become a player.

On the same program, W. Jett Lauck, economic adviser to the United Mine Workers of America, said "the labor movement must and soon will be unified."

"The fundamental objectives of the C. I. O. today are the same as they were originally—to join with the craft and trade unions of the A. F. L., to supplement their activities and to work with them toward common objectives," he said.

Woll said: "Labor is entirely willing to have the Government, through its Department of Labor, set up standards and exchange of information and help the settlement of disputes. But it is unalterably opposed to any department of Government attempting to control and direct the relations of industry from a Washington office."

"It is the conviction of an ever-increasing number of the leaders of the American trade union movement that the Government has ventured too far into the extension of its function into the whole area of our industrial life. It has certainly gone a great way in its attempt to control and direct the activities and function of trade unions."

Woll said what was needed in industrial relations is "a more genuine recognition on the part of both management and the workers that they each have rights and responsibilities which should be recognized and that there is a possibility of working out in an orderly and intelligent way the basis of carrying on the production services of the community."

Small Hecht Fire Draws Hundreds

A short-circuited electric wire last night caused a small fire on the sixth floor of the Hecht Co's Building at Seventh and F streets northwest.

An automatic sprinkler and alarm system summoned four fire engine companies, two truck companies and a fire rescue squad which attracted hundreds of spectators. Water from the sprinklers quickly extinguished the blaze and store officials said damage was negligible.

For more than 15 minutes firemen and store employes tried without success to turn off the sprinklers and water seeped through ceilings and ran down a rear stairway.

Connelly Boy Is Buried; Victim of Meningitis

Funeral services for William C. Connelly, jr., 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Connelly, of Silver Spring, Md., who died of spinal meningitis in Providence Hospital, were held yesterday at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home. Burial was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The boy, who was a pupil at St. Michael's School, is survived by two brothers, and a sister, all younger.

Young Texas Governor Favors Third Term for the President

Allred, Horatio Alger Executive, Sees No Other Man on Political Stage Today Who Can Rally Popular Support.

Tradition or no tradition, Gov. James V. Allred, who, at the age of 38, is serving his second term as Governor of Texas, favors a third term for President Roosevelt.

In response to a question about his third-term views, Gov. Allred said:

"The people of Texas love President Roosevelt. His popularity is as great today as it ever was. He's the one man they want to follow.

"I am for him if he is available. Frankly, at the present time I don't see any other leader to whom the people will rally. Tradition or no tradition, I'd rather risk him than any man on the political scene today."

Gov. Allred, the second-youngest Governor in the history of Texas, came to Washington with Edward Clark, secretary of state for Texas, and O. S. Carpenter, chairman of the Texas Unemployment Insurance Commission. They want to have the Social Security Commissoin pass on rules and regulations before mailing out the first unemployment insurance checks in Texas next month.

Allred's career is like a page from Horatio Alger. In 1919, just after he had been honorably discharged from the Navy, he startled three other former blueackets by saying, "I'm going back to Texas to run for Governor." Sixteen years later, he stood on the Capitol steps at Austin and was inaugurated. In his race for Governor, he defetaed Miriam "Ma" Ferguson.

Last year Gov. Allred was re-elected for a second term. Never in the history of Texas has there been a Governor who served a third term. However, there is a strong movement already afoot to have young Allred continue in the Goveronor's mansion after his present term expires.

Laughingly, Allred said last night that he "appreciated" the compliment. But beyond that he would not go.

He had luncheon with President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday. Among the things they did not talk about, he said, was a third term for the President.

"Personally," he said afterward, "I don't believe the President is even thinking about it."

Gov. Allred and his party plan to leave for home today.

U. S. Plans to Free Idle Gold Hoard, Thomas Reports

By the Associated Press.

Senator Thomas (Democrat) Oklahoma, yesterday said he had "positive information" Federal fiscal authorities were discussing the possibility of using more of the Government's idle gold.

The veteran "easy money" advocate said part of the "sterilized" millions might be brought out as an ordinary credit move to improve business, or used later in direct payment of Federal relief bills.

Thomas' information coincided with an informal statement by Representative Hancock (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Banking Committee, that he, too, had "confidential" assurance some step to use more gold "would be taken during the next Congress."

Representative Boileau (Progressive), Wisconsin, said the President's estimate of Federal relief requirements next March probably would determine the action on gold.

U. S. Ships 'Goodwill' Australian Trip Lauded

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 29 (AP).—Premier Joseph A. Lyons was highly pleased today over the decision of the United States to send four "good-will" cruisers here to participate in exercises commemorating the 150th anniversary of the founding of the commonwealth.

Premier S. S. Stevens, of New South Wales, also asserted the cruisers' visit would guarantee success of the pageant, which begins January 26.

Subway Exit Tricky.

New York, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Joseph and Anthony Gioia, 6 and 7 years old, respectively, tried to save their nickels today by sneaking into a subway station through the exit gates. It took 12 policemen from three radio cars 30 minutes to rescue Joseph, whose head was locked in the iron bars of the gate.

Beach, Gaming Nemesis, Quits As Prosecutor

Nuckols, Floratos Appeals May Be Delayed by Resignation.

Samuel F. Beach, for three years an Assistant United States Attorney assigned to prosecution of major criminal cases here, has resigned to practice law privately, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett announced yesterday.

Speculation as to Beach's successor was stilled because the resignation of Col. Garnett becomes effective tomorrow. Until a new District attorney is appointed the vacancy will go unfilled.

Two major cases recently successfully prosecuted by Beach were those in which Carroll P. (Nubby) Nuckols and six of his alleged henchmen were convicted of violating the gaming laws and one in which Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos and five associates were convicted of gaming charges.

In addition the youthful prosecutor had been assigned to more than 30 gaming trials now crowding the court calendar. Pending appeals of those convicted may be impeded by Beach's resignation because some other assistant will have to familiarize himself with volumes of evidence to combat them.

Beach is the son of Morgan Beach, erstwhile United States Attorney here and now a practicing lawyer. He will enter his father's office for the present and thereafter will open his own offices, associates said.

'Improper' at 18.

New York, Dec. 29 (U.P.).—Federal Court Judge Grover M. Moscowitz refused today to let Pauline Kolenda, 18, plaintiff in a negligence suit, pull up her skirt and show the jury a scar 2 inches above her knee. "Because of her age, it would be improper to ask her to expose herself," the judge said.

Boy Sees Father Kill Mother, Then End His Own Life

Clintwood, Va., Dec. 29 (AP).—Sheriff J. H. Anderson said tonight Ballard Atkins, 40, murdered his wife, Gertrude, 37, this morning and then took his own life.

Anderson said 12-year-old Vincent Atkins told him his father shot his mother while she slept. Vincent, in the same bed, said he "ducked" under the covers. After the shot was fired, he said he peeped out and saw his father place the gun under his chin and pull the trigger.

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1937 17

This Morning

By Shirley Povich.

With a bit of foresight yesterday, Mr. Roosevelt might have rid himself of much of his budget-balancing worries by risking two of his rich uncle's—Uncle Sam's—dollars on a parlay on the first six races at Tropical Park yesterday.

POVICH.

Horse players' heads are still swimming from the fancy figures of the pay-offs at Miami yesterday. If it wasn't the dizziest day in turf history from a long-odds viewpoint it will do until the mutuel machines come down with palsy and cough up their iron men indiscriminately.

Just in case you hadn't heard, a nag named Earl Porter buck-jumped home in front in the opening race of the day and enriched every lucky two-buck ticket holder with $97.30. Roughly, it was 49 to 1 that Earl Porter returned in that first race.

It wasn't exactly a disappointed lot of betters who moved up to the windows to cash in on Rexas Pony in the day's second race, either. For their two-buck stubs, each lucky guy or gal got himself a handful of folding money, or, to be exact, $77.80. That was 39 to 1, give or take a few cents.

• • • •

And in that third race, a steed named Geologist caught the spirit of the thing and romped home at the munificent odds of 28 to 1, by way of letting the boys down easy. The Geologist ticket holders reaped $55.60 for each $2 ticket.

Tropical Park was no place for the faint-hearted yesterday and probably lucky for some it was that they were bolstered for what was to come. For along abou. the sixth race, a 3-year-old maiden which hadn't gone to the post since last June, paid of in national debt figures.

Escohigh, a daughter of the good Escoba, with Stout in the saddle, made a show of that sixth race and the fourteen ticket holders took the entire pot. There was nothing trifling about Escohigh's pay-off. She returned $571 for each $2 win ticket, $121.40 for each place ticket and $47.80 for show tickets. Boiled down, Escohigh was a 281-to-1 shot, even if she did gallop home by two lengths like something that should have been 1 to 2.

• • • •

If it were possible to let a $2 note ride on those first six winners yesterday, parlaying the bet, the return would have been, roughly, around $140.000, which, as the saying goes, ain't exactly hay. And if you were still in a betting mood after those fancy figures at Tropical yesterday, two bucks on Stop Scout at Santa Anita would have gotten you $196.60. It was a fair day for the moon shooters.

But Escohigh, as a long shot, doesn't deserve mention in the same inhalation with a nag known as Wishing Ring, which pranced home at Latonia one June 17 day in 1912. In an 11-horse field at a mile-and-sixteenth distance, Wishing Ring, ridden by a long-since-forgotten jockey named Estep, paid $1,885.50 in the $2 mutuels, $744.40 to place and $172.40 to show.

Thus Wishing Ring was a 942-to-1 shot, which in itself is not notable, but when those kind win they take on sudden and complete notoriety. In fact, Wishing Ring still rates as the producer of the biggest mutuel ever returned on an American track.

But Wishing Ring's long odds were only trifling compared to what happened at Haydack Park, England, that November day in 1929, when Mrs. Answorth, the wife of a Liverpool physician, risked 2 shillings (50 cents) on a steed named Coole and dragged down a net return of a cool $1,705. All that the horse did that day was to win at the record odds of 3,400 to 1.

At that, Coole didn't break by such a terrific margin the previous world record pay-off. That was held by a horse named Robeldo, which paid off at 3037 to 1 in American dollars, not in Chinese money. That little trick was also turned in 1929.

The long-shot victory that American turf fans will remember best, though, occurred about six years ago in the famed Travers stake which drew a four-horse field at Belmont. That day, it was supposed to be a two-horse race between Woodward's Gallant Fox and Whitney's Whichone. But the one-eyed wonder, Jim Dandy, found the sloppy track to his liking, flicked mud in the eyes of Whichone and Gallant Fox throughout the stretch and won at odds of 100 to 1 in the big, est upset in years.

• • • •

Those were bookmakers odds, of course, and the bockies, on occasion have taken it on the chin severely. There was the day at Washington Park, Chicago, in 1894, when they laid 500 to 1 against Peytonia to their sorrow. And at Oakland, Calif., in in 1909 the bookies got the same 500-to-1 dose from a hay-burner named Bright Skies.

• • • •

Beautiful Hialeah was the scene of one of the freakiest mutuel pay-offs when Baal ran second on February 4, 1932. Baal was not exactly a favorite, paying $971.10 to each guy who could show a $2 place ticket.

• • • •

But it remained for Charles Town, where the racegoers have learned that anything can happen, to provide the freak to end all freaks.

Crowd Bets Only $46 to Win on Filly

Fortune Pay-Off Close on Heels of Other Major Upsets.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 29. Climaxing one of the biggest upset days in Florida racing history, the 3-year-old filly Escohigh, owned by the Woolford Farm of Kansas City's Herbert M. Woolf, won today's sixth race and paid $571 for a $2 straight ticket. The daughter of Escoba returned $121.40 place and $47.80 show and won by two lengths from Maebob. Long Face was another length away in third position.

Of the $14,594 wagered straight on the race, only $46 was bet on Escohigh. Her place backing amounted to $47 and the show, $100. The filly was ridden by Andy Schlenker, an Ohio apprentice lad.

According to the available records, the best previous price paid on a winner this year was the 128 to 1 returned against the chances of Robert S., which won at this same track last winter. A few seasons ago at Hialeah Park, Baal paid more than $900 for $2 in finishing second.

Escohigh, entered for $2,500 in this claiming event, had not started since June 8 at Riverside Park, Kansas City. She finished third on that occasion. Before that she was second and third. This was her third triumph in 11 starts this year.

The first three winners today paid long prices, as if working up to the "big event." Earl Porter won the opener to return $97.30; Texas Tony took the second race to pay $77.80, while Geologist's backers in the third had to be satisfied with a mere $55.60.

Escohigh broke in front of her 11 rivals. She was temporarily passed by Long Face, but regained command near the far turn, opened up a five-length lead and coasted the remainder of the 6-furlong trip, finishing in 1:12 1-5. Maebob raced forwardly from the start, but could not menace the surprise horse, much to the relief of the comparative few that held the lucky tickets on Escohigh.

With the benefit of one local effort under his belt and aided by a strong ride from Stirling Young, Shining Sun won the Palm Island Handicap of 1 mile by a head. In the silks of Henry Lustig's Longchamps Farms, the 4-year-old son of Sun Edwin just got up to beat out War Emblem, one of Mrs. Emil Denemark's campaigners. B. F. Whitaker's sluggish beginner, Rouge et Noir, was beaten two lengths for the place.

Le Mar Stock Farm's Marmara was a bitter disappointment. He was outrun and finally Conrad Mann brought up the rear.

Shining Sun, which showed some smart efforts on New York tracks the past season, sped the 8 furlongs in 1:38 4-5. His backers received $8.50 for $2.

For 7 furlongs, it seemed that the Denemark charm, which prevails so constantly in Florida racing, was going to prevail once again. War Emblem, out of action since last June, when he raced in high-class company, rushed past the speedy Shining Sun on the way to the clubhouse turn and opened up two lengths' advantage. Shining Sun, which likes to run in front, appeared due for a fall, but Young kept working on his mount. He applied the whip in the final quarter-mile and gained his objective when War Emblem, apparently a trifle short, shortened stride in the bitter drive to the wire.

The succession of winning outsiders was halted in the 1-mile fourth race when Sir Ally, paying $4.40, gave the talent a chance to recoup. Freshened up since the middle of November, Sir Ally ran as if outclassing the big field of juveniles. He gained command early and merely galloped away from his opposition, clicking by a half dozen lengths. Blue Ice, well up all the way, lasted to head the long-priced Lovick for the place.

These Are the Mighty Gopher Cagers Who Meet G. W. Saturday

Eddie Alzek, Straiges in Semifinal

Meet Monday on Fight Card in Eight-Round Bout.

Eddie Alzek, the elongated New York lightweight, considered one of the most dangerous punchers in his division, and Joey (Baby Face) Straiges, of Camden, have been hooked up for an eight-round match next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Alzek, who has won two straight in Washington, and who has some 24 knockouts to his credit, and the clever punching Straiges will be co-featured with Nick Camarata, flashy New Orleans fighter, and Vernon Cormier, the globe-trotting Bostonian, who had been previously signed.

Straiges, strictly a puncher, and Alzek, strictly a boxer, will be meeting for the first time, with Straiges facing his toughest assignment since his gallant stand against Pedro Montanez last month.

Alzek, handled by Irving Cohen, has captured 38 out of 40 fights since entering the paid ranks. Among his local victims are Billy Bullock, who was stopped in six heats, and Pete Galiano, rugged Baltimorean, who was given perhaps the worst lacing of his career.

Y.M.C.A. Captures Handball Tilts

Ranking players of the Y. M. C. A. holiday handball tournament came through with flying colors in the quarter-final play last night, all of them taking straight game matches.

Jack Schwartz easily disposed of Walter Englehardt, 21-19, 21-20; George Wendlandt trounced George Newman, 21-12, 21-8; Gus Goldstein walloped Albert Levin, 21-6, 21-10, and L. C. Moore defeated Charles Walden, 21-14, 21-14.

Semi-final matches, both singles and doubles, will be held tomorrow night, with the finals slated as one of the many features of the Y. M. C. A. New Year's Day program.

Bill Reinhart Calls Gophers Near Perfect

If there is anything Minnesota's basketball team can't do, Bill Reinhart, George Washington's coach, failed to detect it Monday night when the Gophers swamped Long Island at New York. Reinhart, whose team meets the Westerners Saturday night at Tech High School, scouted the Gophers and is sorry he did, not having slept well since.

"Sports writers say it was the best team that ever has played in the Garden," he said. "And I believe them. It's faster'n the devil; good on long as well as short shots; the players aren't too tall, but tall enough, and they have a terrific drive.

"They're never still a moment. Up and down the court all the time, showing a typical Western team's drive. And they have plenty of ability on the floor. Their passing against Long Island was almost flawless. Long Island used a zone defense in the first half, and Minnesota made it look foolish in the last part of the period. Then it shifted into a man-for-man defense in the second period, and Minnesota made it look even worse.

"I don't think any team that has played here before is quite like this one, or as good as this one. Minnesota may have had a "hot" hand Monday night, but it can lose a lot of that form and still be awfully tough, it's that good."

But Reinhart believes the Colonials will give their guests a nice, healthy jaunt for their guarantee, and he wouldn't be at all surprised if his boys won.

"We're pointing for this game," he said, "and I expect the boys to give a good account of themselves."

Meanwhile the Minnesota State Society has reserved a special section of seats for the game, and fans interested in obtaining ducats may do so by calling Leonard Larson, president of the society, at National 3229.

Fresh from two sensational games in Madison Square Garden, Minnesota's basketball vrew arrives here tonight for its game with George Washington Saturday. The Gopher squad, headed by Coach Dave MacMillan, will arrive at 9 p m and will make its headquarters at the Ambassador Hotel

MacMillan plans a workout tomorrow, probably in the Tech High gym, scene of Saturday night's game With the exception of Martin Rolek, star guard, who twisted his knee in the Long Island game on Monday night, the entire squad is in fine shape.

Central Alumni Ready for Game

Forrest Burgess last night announced the Central alumni who have been lined up to meet the varsity in one of the features of the annual Central alumni reunion program, which will be held New Year's Day. The players who have expressed a desire to play are Ben Burch, Billy Woodward, Ollie Tipton, Buddy Nau, Billy Vermillion and Burgess.

Washington Gun Club Elects 1938 Officers

The Washington Gun Club held its annual meeting last night in the offices of H. B. Bingham and elected officers for 1938.

Those elected were Herbert B. Bingham, jr., president; Dr. J. H. Lyons, vice president; Walter S. Wilson, treasurer, and R. D. Morgan, secretary.

The first shoot of the new year will be held January 3 over the traps near Benning.

Coaches Turn Down Drastic Rule Changes

Agree to Revision of Out of Bounds Proviso and Forward Pass Touching Ineligible Player; Will Be Presented Sunday.

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 29.—The Nation's football coaches turned thumb's down today on any general revision of the rules, but suggested two changes which they said would make the game more spectacular through increased scoring.

Lou Little, Columbia University coach and chairman of the rules committee, which met today, said the group agreed on these recommendations:

1. That when the ball goes out of bounds or becomes dead within 15 yards of the side line, it be put in play 15 yards from the side line. The present rule provides that the ball be brought out 10 yards.

2. That a forward pass which "inadvertently" touches an ineligible man behind the line of scrimmage be called incomplete and counted as a down. Under present rules, when such a condition occurs, the offensive team loses the ball.

Ask Clarification on Pass.

The group also asked for a clearer interpretation of the rule relating to intentional grounding of a forward pass.

Little and Dana X. Bible, Texas University coach, will present the suggestions to the rules committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association when it meets Sunday at Edgewater Park on the Mississippi gulf coast.

Bible, acting as spokesman for the coaches, said the majority of them thought the rules were in "pretty good shape."

"Chairman Little," he said, "sent out questionnaires to 600 coaches and received about 350 replies.

"Most of these expressed the belief that, from the standpoint of the coach, the present rules give him an opportunity for as diversified play as he wants.

"From the standpoint of the player the rules afford him as much protection as they possibly can. The replies said the rules also appeared satisfactory from the standpoint of officials.

Rules Please Spectators.

"Both of our suggested changes are designed to help the offense.

"If the ball is brought in 15 yards, instead of 10, from the sidelines, it will give more opportunity for plays to the short side.

Bible said the new pass recommendation "will encourage a greater use of the shovel pass behind the line of scrimmage and consequently give the offense more chance to score."

The 35 coaches who gathered for the rules committee meeting discussed at length the controversy over whether the offense or defense is stronger.

"The general belief," said Bible, "is that they are pretty well balanced under the existing rules."

Smith and Dodson to Play Off for Title and First Money Today; Wiffy Cox in Money as Snead Is Shut Out.

By H. J. Aronstam,
United Press Staff Writer.

Hollywood, Fla., Dec. 29.—Horton Smith, the blond, curly-haired Chicago veteran, staged a brilliant, up-hill finish to tie Leonard Dodson, an unknown from Springfield, Mo., for the Hollywood Beach Hotel Open golf championship today.

Smith fired a final round of 67, three strokes under par, to make up a two-stroke deficit and catch Dodson.

Both had 72-hole scores of 278 and will meet in an 18-hole play-off tomorrow for the title and the $750 first-place purse.

Dodson's Play Steady.

Dodson, however, deserved credit for his steady play throughout the tournament, which surprised most of the galleryites, for thus far his greatest claim to fame was winning the Ohio State and Philadelphia opens.

Dodson put together rounds of 67, 71, 71 and 69. Smith opened with a 67, took a 71 yesterday, added a bad 73 this morning and came in with his redeeming 67 this afternoon.

Smith went into the final 18-hole dash with a 211. Going out on the first nine Smith fired birdies at the second and ninth and an eagle at the seventh—where he rammed a 45-foot putt home—for a 33. He needed 34 strokes coming back.

Dodson played good, steady golf on his final round. He knifed two strokes from par going out in 34 and returned in 35, one over, for 69.

Metz Wins $400.

Dick Metz, of Chicago, who flashed into the lead at the 54-hole mark, went two over regulation figures on the last 18 holes for a 72-hole total of 280, which won him the $400 third-place purse.

Craig Wood, the blond bomber of Rumson, N. J., shot the best game of golf he has played in years to take the fourth-place prize of $350 with a 281.

A stroke farther back in the 72-hole grind were Ralph Guldahl, of Coral Gables, Fla., the National Open champion; the veteran Tommy Armour, of Boca Raton, Fla.; Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Frank Moore, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., at 282.

Harrison, Horne Tie.

Seven strokes behind the leaders at 285 were E. J. Harrison, of Little Rock, Ark.; Stanley Horne, Canadian P. G. A. champion; Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa., and Bill Heinlein, of Indianapolis.

D.C. Athletes Will Aid Fund

Basketball, Boxing Set on Birthday Card.

Local universities will not meet in a series of basketball games for the benefit of the President's Birthday Celebration program, it was stated yesterday by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the local committee.

Instead, each school will share the proceeds of a regularly scheduled game, which will be publicized by the Birthday Committee.

Meeting at the District Building yesterday, representatives of the Georgetown, George Washington, Catholic, and Maryland Universities informed the Commissioner that their schedules were too heavy during January and February to make an open date for the local series.

Commissioner Hazen announced that a Golden Gloves boxing show would be arranged by the local committee for the benefit of the President's Birthday Celebration fund. It will be held at Catholic University.

EARL PORTER, going well up on the outside, gradually improved his position in the final quarter mile, wore the leaders down at the furlong pole, drew out through the stretch and held NAUGHTY safe in the final drive. NAUGHTY broke tardily on the inside, was taken around the leaders leaving the backstretch, bettered her position under pressure, but could not overtake the winner. SUN ANTIOCH broke alertly, forced a fast pace and raced TRINCHERA into defeat in the early stages, but then faltered in the last furlong.

TEXAS TONY followed the leader well up under light restraint in the early running, began to better his position on the stretch turn when placed to pressure and drew away in the last sixteenth mile. RETLAW opened up a big lead with a rush in the run down the backstretch, saved ground rounding the turn, but then faltered suddenly when challenged. DARK MAY, quickest to begin, lacked speed and was outrun, moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but was forced wide by the winner and lost considerable ground.

THIRD RACE—Coral Way course (140 feet less than 1¼ miles). Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:37. Off 2:58. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GEOLOGIST, $55.60, $18.90, $9.70; WILLIAM V., $5.40, $3.60; MISS CAPERS, $10.90.

GEOLOGIST, running in much improved form, followed the pace under restraint in the opening six furlongs, closed willingly when placed to a drive and opened up a winning lead in the stretch. WILLIAM V. moved up gamely rounding the lower turn, but then faltered in the final furlong and just lasted long enough to stall off MISS CAPERS' challenge. MISS CAPERS, on the inside, was buffeted around in the early stages, gained steadily when obtaining clear racing room and closed going strongly.

FOURTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $700; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:25. Off 3:28½. Winner, A. W. Abbot's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SIR ALLY, $4.40, $3.70, $3.00; BLUE ICE, $13.50, $9.50; LOVICK, $16.90.

SIR ALLY, running as if much the best, took command at his leisure after going a half mile, was rated in front rounding the lower turn and opened up a winning lead entering the stretch to win in hand. BLUE ICE, a forward contender all the way, closed gamely to strong pressure and outlasted LOVICK. The latter, slow to get going, worked his way up on the outside in the last three furlongs to finish going gamely.

SHINING SUN, quickest to get going, was eased off the pace entering the backstretch, but followed the leader closely until straightened out in the stretch, finished courageously and got up in the last strides. WAR EMBLEM displayed high speed and assumed an easy lead in the first quarter mile, but then faltered suddenly in the last furlong and was unable to stave off the winner's challenge. ROUGE ET NOIR, on the inside all the way, saved much ground and, closing stoutly, outlasted MARMARA in the final drive.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:22. Off 4:23½. Winner, Woolford Farm's b. f. ESCOHIGH, away forwardly, went in close attendance of the pace until approaching the quarter mile pole, then opened up a commanding lead with a rush and was taken in hand in the last 70 yards. MAEBOB showed more speed than usual in the early running, finished gamely to punishment and held LONG FACE safe. The latter, prominent all the way, continued with good courage when the final test came.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 4:50. Off 4:50½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' b. g. STOCKS, on the inside in tight quarters, was blocked while trying to steal through on the inside leaving the backstretch, swung around the leader at the quarter-mile pole, moved to the front willingly and held COLONEL ED safe at the finish under a hand ride. COLONEL ED, rushed to the front and showing the most speed, saved ground into the stretch, but faltered under a drive. UP AND UP, rated off the pace until well around the turn, made a game effort, but was unable to overhaul the leaders.

EIGHTH RACE—Coral Way course (140 feet less than 1¼ miles). Purse, $700; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:17. Off 5:19. Abe Kashey, Steve Casey In Feature

Three All-Star Matches on Holiday Mat Card Tonight.

Abe (King Kong) Kashey, who would like nothing better than a mixed match with Joe Louis, will uncork his famous chin stupor grasp in the direction of Steve (Crusher) Casey, the Irish ace, tonight at Turner's Arena in one of three one-fall-to-a-finish matches on Turner's holiday wrestling card.

Kashey, considered Syria's greatest contribution to wrestling, is a hairy, two-fisted performer, who quit a job as a railway mail clerk in his country to dabble into the more thrilling profession of grunt and grapple.

Kashey and Casey will share the spotlight with four other wrestlers. Jesse James, the handsome, bronzed Greek sensation, who has built up quite a following here as a result of his draw with Chief Thunderbird, will meet Paddy Mack, a rough and tumble youngster from Ireland. Seven feet two, 275-pound John Sullivan, the bearded wonder of the mat, will trip the heavy fantastic toe with Billy Hanson, of Salt Lake City.

In two 30-minute bouts Ram Singh, the Hindu expert who features a special kind of Indian armlock, will make his bow against Henry Kulkovich, and Pierre De Clane, the French champion, makes his debut against Al Periera, European champion.

Minnesota Tops N. Y. U

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Minnesota and Stanford, exponents of two widely varied styles of basketball, both came from behind tonight to keep their New York record clean, the Gophers turning in a 36 to 31 decision over New York University after the West Coast Indians had trimmed Long Island University, 49 to 35.

As on Monday night, when Minnesota defeated Long Island and Stanford beat City College, more than 18,000 fans packed Madison Square Garden. They saw Stanford, with Hank Lusetti and Art Stoefen leading its firebrand style of play, overcome a half-time deficit with a brilliant drive in the last 10 minutes and then watched as the little Gophers worked deliberately to match New York University's deadly shooting from the free throw line.

Minnesota's scoring was well divided with Kundla accounting for eight points, Addington for seven and Separ and Nash, six each. Irwin Witty and Bernie Carnevale led the well rounded N. Y. U. attack with seven and six points, respectively.

Three years ago at the little West Virginia track, an oat-muncher named Sweep Vestal won and nobody was paid off. For the simple reason that nobody had thought enough of the nag to bet on him. So the track paid the win pool to holders of tickets on the horse that finished second. But that, of course, was at Charles Town, as we were saying.

C Club Picks Leaders for 1938 Term

Body Votes for Complete Reorganization, New Sports Impetus.

By Jack Munhall.

Called together for the express purpose of formulating plans for immediate and complete reorganization of the Central C Club alumni, 26 members attended the annual Christmas meeting last night at the University Club and elected officers and committees for the ensuing year.

A nominating committee, consisting of Sylvan King, Dick Newby and George Norris named the following men who were unanimously elected to office: Acting President Steve Porter, president; J. Van Dyne, first vice president; Grover Naylor, second vice president; Henry King, treasurer, and John H. Munhall, secretary.

As in previous years committees were appointed by the president to investigate and further sports at Central High School. Al Stern was appointed chairman of the track committee which will promote the well-known C Club track meet this May. Van Dyne was appointed vice chairman and Sylvan King and Newby were named his assistants.

Newby was appointed chairman of the swimming committee; Munhall, chairman of the basketball committee; and J. P. Yoder, chairman of the football committee. James Stewart and Edward De Lisio were named assiatants to Yoder.

Sounding the keynote of the meeting, Sylvan King, one of Central's greatest athletes and a former president of the C Club, deplored the decline of the once-powerful C Club and urged that immediate steps be taken to again elevate it to the influential position enjoyed for many years. King's sentiments strongly reflected the wishes of other members, who quickly expressed agreement with his address.

A discussion of the new eligibility rules and other changes made since the ascension of Birch E. Rayh to the controlling position in public high school athletics aroused much interest. A majority of the members favored an investigation to determine the results of a new age limit which would bar, from all athletics, any boy reaching the age of 19 before September, and also restrictions on the number of games that teams be allowed to play.

Old-Time Rasslers Lacked Color? Just Read This Story!

By Walter Haight.

I had just finished mailing New Year cards to friends I did not have on my Christmas card list who sent me Christmas cards, when in walked Dapper Dave Herman. That hardly is news, friends, strictly speaking, for we of the sports department see more of Dapper Dave in his present capacity of pumping the bellows of publicity for Turner's Arena than we did when he was golf expert of the Post.

After Dapper Dave had gotten all the "How'ya, pal," out of his system and had slapped the back of everyone on the second floor, including three members of the Ladies Aid Society who were chit-chatting with the Sunday editor across the room, I managed to get in a "What'ya know?"

"What do I know—why, the wrestling show. How about that, Walter? There's rhyme for you. Know and show—I should be writing poetry like Joe Holman. How about it?" came back Dave.

I wasn't asking a question just to be starting conversation. I am familiar with press agents who rave and rave and finally, through some slip of the tongue, come through with some fact or crack that paves the way for a feature story.

"What do I know? Don't kid me, Pal," continued Dave. "Why that wrestling show Thursday night is the greatest yet. Action, color, foreigners, champions, a giant, a Hindu, a Greek—I tell you, Pal, we're going to have everything. Take the main bout, there's Ram Singh, the Calcutta Clipper. I understand he's related to Mahatma Gandi. He's making his first appearance in town and he's going to pull some voodoo on that Henry Kulkovich, the Russian Ripsnorter. Singh's the sensation of the East. Listen, Pal, and don't think that Pierre de Glane, the French Fricasse, isn't going to put on a match with Al Pierre, champion of all the crowned heads of Europe. And don't forget the Irish, predominating, as usual. Yes, predominating, Pal. Take Steven Casey, the Kerry County Crusher, he tries to flatten Abe Kashey, the mat's King Kong Kris Kingle, and then there's Paddy Mack, the Dublin Dynamiter, who is going to try to make Jesse James say 'Uncle' in Greek. That's a fair crack, eh, Pal? And we have another Irishman. He's John Sullivan, he was known as the Blarney Boaconstrictor until somebody told him there wasn't any snakes in Ireland. Some joke, Pal. Sullivan meets a Swede, Billy Hanson, of Salt Lake City. I haven't throught up one of these red hot wrestling names for him yet. That's the card, Pal. You might call it the 'League of Nations Show,' entertainment worth the dough. There I go again, Pal. How about that? Show and dough—how about me dashing you off some wrestling poetry?"

I told Dapper Dave that the show must have everything and that my Thursday night would not be complete without a peek at the mauling matmen, but that in order to insure eating money, I must dig up a feature story before sunset.

"Why didn't you ask me, Pal?" responded Dapper Dave. "Why not write a piece comparing the present wrestling with that of 1914? Lots of pep and new things now. You know, in 1914, it was just straight wrestling, little action, no color, no showmanship. There you are, Pal. See you Thursday."

Wrestling in 1914—no color, little action, just straight wrestling, no showmanship. Dapper Dave should have been with Jim Mooney and me a certain night in January, 1914. Hold your hats, friends, here I go again

Ordinarily there would be little connection between two youngsters of 14 years in need of haircuts and a wrestling show, but in this case there was. It was a coincidence that Mrs. Compton and Mrs. Haight should hand to boys a quarter with orders to get their locks trimmed.

We met under the street lamp. We had gone home a few minutes before to try to get movie money for the fifth episode of "The Million Dollar Mystery." I read failure in Jimmy's approach. No, he didn't connect.

His mother gave him only the quarter for a haircut, I was in the same fix. It looked like the cheering section down front in the Star Theater at Fourteenth and U would have to carry on without two important members.

But Haight ingenuity was ripening, even at that early age. Yes, I had it! I had seen the advertisement in The Post. "Get your haircut for 10 cents," it read, "at the barber school, 714 Pennsylvania avenue."

We went into a huddle. By getting out haircuts for 10 cents we would have 15 cents left. We would walk down to the barber school and use a nickel to ride back. Then we would have a dime each and be able to catch the last show.

Everything would have worked out all right had not Jim drawn a freshman at the barber school. After the would-be barber had slipped with the scissors and cut a young Suez Canal across the back of Jim's head, the headmaster of the school looked over the situation and decided that the only solution was to put the clippers all over his head.

I had better luck. My right ear was slightly chipped, but the mirror revealed a very creditable "navy yard feather edge," the tops in hair styles among the young blades of that area.

But Haight ingenuity could find nothing to explain to Jim's strong-armed father why he should get a summer haircut in January. Jim scratched his bald head without gaining a productive idea.

We were pondering the situation as we walked up Pennsylvania avenue. The lights of the Bijou Theater loomed ahead. We stopped to look at the pictures of the burlesque queens outside. There was a big sign over the doorway — "Wrestling Tonight After The Show—Bull Montana vs. The Terrible Greek. To A Finish."

We went into conference. For 15 cents we could get into the gallery. Just think, big show and then a wrestling match. Of course, we couldn't hold out any carfare but we could walk home. What about getting home late? Well, Jim was afraid to go home with a bald head anyway.

And so the "Million Dollar Mystery" lost two customers to the "Coney Island Kckers" and a wrestling match.

The leading lady had just finished her third rendering of "In the Heart of a City That Has No Heart" when the drums rolled and a man appeared on the stage. In his hand was a yellow paper, obviously a telegram. After the whistling and catcalls had subsided, he read in solemn tones, "Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, January 23, 1914 stop unavoidably delayed in catching train at New York stop pulling out of Philadelphia now stop engineer has been informed of importance of my getting to Washington quick stop (signed) Bull Montana, 8:41 p. m."

It was just befort intermission that the drum rolled again and a horn sounded. This time there were no howls as the announcer came to the center of the stage. Silence reigned (or whatever it does on those occasions.) Yes, it was another telegram.

"Wilmington, Delaware, January 23, 1914 stop," droned the announcer, "Train just took on water here stop just tipped fireman $10 and he will keep steam high stop may be 15 minutes late for match stop don't let Greek run out stop (signed) Bull Montana, 9:01 p. m.

The show seemed to have been forgotten. Men talked loudly to friends and foes in other parts of the theater. Bets were made that Montana would not arrive! The comedian told jokes to himself. (Probably a good break). Intermission came and went and the show began anew—with another telegram.

"Elkton, Maryland, January 23, 1914 stop mail car developed hotbox stop crew working frantically stop might have to hire Maxwell at Baltimore stop Tell Joe Turner and Louis Zerega to hold Greek stop (signed) Bull Montana, 9:59 p. m."

"Havre de Grace, Maryland, January 23, 1914 stop no new developments on hotbox stop came across bridge at 50 miles per hour stop wired ahead for Maxwell at Baltimore stop I hate Greeks stop (signed) Bull Montana, 10:21 p. m."

"Baltimore, Maryland, January 23, 1914 stop Maxwell hire cost me $40 stop glad to pay that for chance at Greek stop three cheers for Italia stop (signed) Bull Montana, 10:32 p. m."

"Laurel, Maryland, January 23, 1914 stop just had flat tire stop changed into my tights while tire being fixed stop I still hate all Greeks stop (signed) Bull Montana, 10:49 p. m."

And then came:

"Gentlemen, quiet please. I just received a phone call from Bladensburg, Maryland. Bull Montana says he expects to arrive at 11:02. He has changed into wrestling suit and wants the Greek to be in his corner."

And as the last of the Coney Island Kickers did her curtsie at the wing of the stage, bedlam broke loose. There were shouts of "There he is!" and "The greata Montana, I knowa he coma."

From the gallery Jim and I leaned forward trying to see Montana. There he was dressed in wrestling tights, carrying a suitcase from which protruded underwear, collars and a pants leg, fairly flying down the aisle, carried along by slaps on his back from his rooters.

To a bedlam that must have rivaled the cheering when the last spike was driven in the transcontinental railroad, Montana bounded onto the stage, threw his suitcase to one side just as the rear curtain went up, revealing a wrestling mat on which stood the Terrible Greek fairly foaming at the mouth while trying to get away from his handlers and the referee.

Montana jumped over the ropes just as the Greek was turned loose. The battle was on. If there is anything in the present-day wrestling book that the Greek and Montana did not do, I'll eat the Department of Justice Building which now occupies the site of the Bijou Theater.

A half dozen police were stationed around the mat. Montana tossed the Greek out to the ninth row several times and the Greek retaliated by throwing him into the box seats. On these occasions the customers got in a few personal licks. Fights broke out in all sections of the theater. A policeman pulled Montana's fingers out of the Greek's eyes and the Greek finally released his grip on a piece of hamburger that had been Montana's ear.

Jim and I lost all judgment of time. I finally worked up courage to ask a Montana rooter for the hour when he lit his cigar. "She'sa now justa seven minute after 4 o'clock."

This was a problem. Four o'clock. We left. I could almost feel the stick. We walked home. We had given up the idea of jointly trying to think of excuses. It was every man for himself. We parted under the street light. was on the front steps and still had no logical excuse to tell my parents. Finally, I decided to be manly. I would walk right in, go up stairs, and, if I was asked, I would tell the truth—burlesque show, wrestling match, Jim's haircut, and everything.

I did just that. The door was unlocked. I walked boldly up the steps, undessed without trying to be quiet, and finally rolled into bed.

When my mother reads this piece, it will be news to her.

Jim was not so fortunate. At the sixth episode of "Million Dollar Mystery," the following week, I was down front in the rooting section, but Jim was standing in the rear of the theater.

Three Unseeded Players Advance in Junior Indoor Tennis.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—Three unseeded players and the five top-ranking stars advanced today into the quarter-final round of the national junior indoor tennis championship at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Two of the unseeded, Henry C. Van Rensselaer, of Kent School, and little Melvin Schwartzman, of Poly Prep, registered upsets over favored rivals. The other, George Kraft, of Erasmus Hall High in Brooklyn, turned in another fine showing after having survived yesterday by eliminating eight-seeded Ralph Dawson, of Trinity School.

Van Rensselaer put out William Umstaedter, of Millburn, N. J., boys' champion a year ago, and ranked No. 6, 6—3, 6—4.

Schwartzman's victim was husky Walcolm Weinstein, of Penn State, No. 7. The score was 6—4, 4—6, 6—3. Kraft, meanwhile, was disposing of David S. Johnsen, of Washington, D. C., 1—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Again setting the pace for the seeded players' advance into the round of eight was William Gillespie, of Scarborough School and Atlanta, Ga. The interscholastic champion whipped Emerson E. Chapin, of the University of Rochester, 6—2, 6—0, and tomorrow will meet Robert Low, of Stanford University and New York, former boys' champion, who won from Robert Dunn, of Merion, Pa., by the same scores.

Steel Wages Gain 21% as Prices Rise 6%

Showdown on Disparity Is Expected Within Next Two Months.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—Showdown on the controversial point of steel prices and wages appears likely within the next two months, Iron Age indicated today in its weekly survey of the iron and steel industry.

"The steel price issue, having been officially injected into the present uncertain situation by an Administration spokesman, may become of paramount importance in the trend of steel business during the early weeks of the new year," the trade publication said.

"The steel industry, through the American Iron and Steel Institute, has only recently taken cognizance of criticism of price increases made early in the year by stating that finished steel averages only 6 per cent higher than in 1926 while wage rates are 21 per cent higher and raw materials cost 17 per cent higher than in that year," it continued.

Government Attack.

"This formal attack on steel prices by the Assistant Attorney General of the United States comes just a few weeks before the opening of negotiations between some of the steel companies and the steel workers' organizing committee for a renewal of the labor contracts that were entered into last March. These negotiations, which are to be begun on February 7, may have an important bearing on both wages and prices in the steel industry.

"Meanwhile the possibility of a lowering of wages in the automobile industry points to the thought that is being given to liquidation of present high manufacturing costs in an effort to revive business."

Pointing out the steel industry is winding up 1937 with average operations of not more than 20 per cent of capacity, the publication said there might be a moderate improvement in output ir the first week of January, but that "further gains may be slow and halting."

Southern Railway Asks To Sell Common Stock

The Southern Railway Company applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission today for authority to issue 1,298,200 shares of no par value common stock and to exchange them for an equal number of outstanding common shares of $100 par.

The public holds Southern Railway stock with a total par value of $129,820,000.

The company told the commission it hopes, when market conditions improve, to sell common stock and convertible bonds as a means of reducing ultimately its fixed interest-bearing debt.

Foreign Sales Lower Cotton

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Further losses in cotton were registered today under foreign selling and liquidation. March, which had recovered from 8.18 to 8.25, turned easy in the last few minutes to close at 8.19. Final prices were 7 to 11 points net lower.

The market opened 9 to 14 points lower and the lowest levels for the day were established in early trading; but after foreign pressure let up, contracts were relatively scarce for a while. Trade price-fixing at limits was uncovered on the decline and helped to absorb the offerings.

Exchange Governors Override Members

New York, Dec. 29 (AP).—Overriding a substantial opposition vote by members, the governing committee of the New York Stock Exchange today adopted amendments to the constitution which will permit members to increase to customers charges for purchase and sale of securities by approximately 11 per cent.

Votes cast in favor of the amendment were 523. The number voting no totaled 415. Balloting was conducted by the members during the last two weeks.

Corn Jumps After Advance In Argentina

Wheat Suffers 2-Cent Drop With Wave of Stop-Loss Orders.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Displaying independence of wheat, corn late today more than overcame losses of aroun a cent here, and responded to fresh jumps of Argentine corn values.

The corn market at Buenos Aires bounded up 1¾ cents, and notwithstanding that but little export business today in United States corn was confirmed, the bracing effect on corn trade sentiment here became quickly evident. Unfavorable crop conditions for corn in Argentina were reported as persistent, and renewal of good-sized European purchasing of corn from the United States was generally considered probable.

In contrast with corn, wheat failed to recover well from an abrupt downward plunge of 2 cents that resulted from a transient wave of stop-loss sales orders.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were exactly unchanged to ⅛ cent higher compared with yesterday's finish, May 61⅜, July 60⅝-¾, wheat ½-1½ cents down, May 90⅛-⅜, July 85-85⅛, oats unchanged to ¼ off, rye ½ lower, and provisions showing 2 cents to 7 cents setback.

Erie Will Issue $5,000,000 Bonds

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Erie Railroad Company yesterday to issue $5,000,000 of refunding and improvement mortgage 6 per cent bonds. The bonds will be placed in the company's treasury in partial reimbursement for capital expenditures already made.

In applying recently for ICC authority to borrow $6,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, the Erie said the $5,000,000 of refunding and improvement mortgage bonds would be among the collateral offered as security.

Stocks Rally in Late Trading as Inflation Hopes Grow; Early New Lows.

New York, Dec. 29.—After a sorry beginning and a dull midday, the stock market gathered courage, in the face of verbal onslaughts from Government officials and of unfavorable trade statistics, and rallied in the last hour to close higher in the active sectors on sales of 2,480,000 shares. Inflation acted as an influence under the surface, the rearmament program being a factor and the veiled hints by the President that heavy doses of spending would come this winter being another. United States bonds, true to form under the inflationary principle, turned lower. Commodities were mixed. May wheat sold down 1¼ cents to 90⅜ cents a bushel.

Today's highlight was the second attack by Assistant Attorney General Jackson on business. What thoroughly incenses Mr. Jackson, and presumably his chief, the President, would seem to be the fact that in the last year or so business has been able to operate at a profit. How the Government could secure enough taxes even to make a beginning at paying carrying charges on its huge debt if private enterprise were not profitable doesn't seem to interest the Administration—just yet.

We Planned It.

The Government's spokesman cited figures tending to show that profits for a few large corporations in 1926 were substantial, especially as compared with the worst depression year, 1932. That ought to have been a cause for congratulation, and President Roosevelt indeed did see fit a few months ago to take full credit for it. That prosperity—the 1926 brand that brought the large profits which now inflame the Department of Justice—came "because we planned it that way." If the harvest was unequally divided between big and little business, as Mr. Jackson seems to think, was that also planned?

Just as the figures on steel wages and profits cited earlier by Mr. Jackson were highly misleading and inaccurate, so today were his innuendoes on corporate profits. For example, in noting the $44,000,000 profit for three farm implement companies in 1936, against a combined loss of $15,000,000 in 1932, it would have been helpful had figures been supplied to show how much of the difference was supplied by taxpayers who had to provide funds for the huge farm bonuses. Steel companies, which were said to have lost $82,000,000 in 1932, made $70,000,000 in 1936. Why that should excite Mr. Jackson is difficult to understand. Gratitude of the steel investors will be withheld until the 1938 losses are counted.

Rule or Ruin.

It was not the details of the first or the second broadside fired by the bombastic Mr. Jackson that disheartened not only Wall street but, presumably, anyone thinking in terms of the country's economic welfare. Rather it was the virulence of the appeal for support of one part of the citizens of the country—those with small wages and moderate incomes—in what seems to be a violent attack by the Administration upon business in general. If anything could well increase the fear already paralyzing business, the Jackson outburst was well suited for the task. Granted that President Roosevelt is sore because his planned economy has come a cropper and because that obvious failure carries with it a threat to his continued popularity and political power, the wisdom of sinking the ship in order to get rid of a mutinous crew may be questioned.

With the approach of the next session of Congress hints are being allowed to slip off the White House roof as to the nature of the President's plans, which this time may not be followed blindly by Congress. However that may be, it is becoming clearer that the general line of attack will be: (1) Business men are to blame for the Roosevelt depression, and (2) they jolly well can put an end to the slump and get going with recovery, or (3) if they don't, President Roosevelt will resume that which he has never discontinued—spending money on a huge scale. He intends to do that anyway, but this time those who have been urging him to balance the budget as a means of restoring confidence will, he thinks, be estopped from criticism particularly if they happen to be business men. It will be so easy to tell them that the high spending this time was brought on by themselves.

More Spending.

The ground is being spaded for reception of the next address to Congress so cleverly that it is almost painful. "Resumption" of large-scale spending will be defended on relief grounds. The men whom business fails to employ will have to be supported by the Government. The budget can be balanced, the President will tell Congress, according to reports from Washington, unless relief expenditures go too high. In other words, any outcry against a mounting deficit will be answered in advance by the question: "Do you want us to let people starve?"

Business knows as does every one that the budget can be balanced by reducing extravagance, quite outside the relief program. Meanwhile, market policy might as well be based upon the assumption that an inflationary barrage is going to be laid down upon the business line this winter, but that many of the shells will be duds because the Government intends to force price cutting wherever it can, particularly in the field of its purchases for the enlarged armament program.

So far as antitrust prosecutions are concerned, if they begin, they can do a great deal further to unsettle business, just as the long-drawn-out oil company proceedings have taken up much time and money and yielded nothing to anybody this summer and autumn. The Government presumably is not seeking, as some of its apologists suggested, a revised antitrust statute; rather it is marshaling a new force of bright young attorneys to spend the next year or so harrying businesmen, particularly those who have had the temerity or the misfortune at any time to do or to say anything that was unpleasant from a New Deal viewpoint. Finally, the ferocity of the Jackson attack suggests realization of defeat; that is to say, the New Deal goat doesn't care much for his new surroundings.

Abnormality.

Alas! sighs Dr. W. Randolph Burgess of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, perhaps we should have done better with less monetary management. At any rate, Dr. Burgess finds that "The years of increased management have witnessed the widest fluctuations for which we have records." Times have been abnormal, he says, in partial extenuation, but aren't times always abnormal when the money and economic managers deal the cards.

Washington Gas Net 6% Over Last Year

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Company filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Company shows operating revenues of $701,607 for November compared with $625,756 for November a year ago, an increase of $75,851. Operating expenses increased $45,971, from $496,646 in November 1936 to $542,617 in November this year as a result of the larger volume of gas handled, leaving net operating revenues of $158,990 for this November, an increase of $29,880. Non-operating revenues likewise increased $16,558 compared with November 1936.

The net result of the month's operation after all deductions for interest and amortization was a net income of $93,175, an increase of $47,448 over the net for November last year, making the showing for the month one of the best of the year. The November earnings bring the net income for eleven months of the current year up to $566,222, an improvement of approximately 6 per cent over the same period last year.

The company reports a growth of 14.8 per cent in gas sales, from 878,855 Mcf in November 1936 to 1,009,126 Mcf in November this year. The 149,108 meters in service at the end of the month also indicate healthy expansion, this figure representing 5,300 more meters than at the end of November 1936.

National Bank of Washington.

Directors of the National Bank of Washington, at the regular monthly meeting held yesterday, declared the regular semiannual dividend of $3 per share, payable January 3, to stockholders of record December 29. Transfer books will be closed from December 29 to January 12.

Building Costs Drop.

A further drop in residential building costs, emphasizing the new downward trend in building material prices, was reported yesterday by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board. Prices of home building materials declined from an index of 95, in October to 93.7 in November, a drop of 1.8 per cent, according to the figures compiled by the board's division of research and statistics. The index basis of 100 is for the year 1926.

London, Dec. 29.—Many sharp declines were recorded in today's stock prices, sentiment being adversely affected by the decline in Wall Street Tuesday. Support was absent at the opening and the setback was widespread, but near the close the decline was checked and prices finished above the low levels of the day. British funds held strong and rubber issues were dull. Far Eastern bonds were weak.

Paris—The bourse closed with a heavy tone and practically all sections lost ground. Rentes were down 25 to 70 centimes and Bank of France issues declined 70 francs. Royal Dutch reacted 45 francs, while Suez Canal finished with a gain of 30 francs.

Liverpool.—Liberal tenders for American soft winter wheat and American selling caused wheat futures here to decline and close ½d to ¾d net lower. Cotton futures declined 6 to 8 points in sympathy with easier Eastern market scattered liquidation and Bombay selling.

Curb Rallies After Decline

Aluminum Co. of America, down most of the day, closed up a point at 78. Technicolor was up 1 at 16. Carrier Corp. at 28¼, Creole Petroleum 21¾ and American Light & Traction 13 were fractionally higher.

Newmong Mining lost 2¼ points at 52¾ and Sherwin Williams was off 1⅜ at 83. Down fractions were Gulf Oil at 36½, Electric Bond & Share 8½, Pan American Airways 15¾, Pittsburgh Plate Glass 86.

Sales were 573,000 shares against 504,000 Tuesday, and the heaviest since October 21.

Brooke Elected Head of C. & O.

Cleveland, Dec. 29. (AP).—George D. Brooke, 35 years a railroad man, became president today of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway, most profitable unit of the network built up by the Van Sweringen brothers and now controlled by Robert R. Young and his associates.

Brooke, 59, succeeds W. J. Harahan, who died December 14 after 11 years as chief of the road. Virginia-born, Brooke was C. & O. general manager 1926-1930, vice president 1930-1936 and became executive vice president last December.

The election of Brooke by C. & O. directors today was the first major appointment in the Van Sweringen railroads since the Young group obtained control. Financial circles looked upon the selection of a operating, rather than non-operating, president as perhaps indicative of the new management's procedure.

Oil Industry Net Is Highest In Eight Years

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 29.—The oil industry made in 1937 its best record for net earnings since 1929, W. S. Farish, president of the Standard Oil Co., of New Jersey, said today. The year also saw, he said, a record production of crude oil and increased demand for domestic consumption and for export.

America drilled more oil during 1937 than in any previous year since the all-time peak of 1920, he said, but "demand kept abreast of supply in fairly good order." However, he predicted 1938 gasoline-consuming season inventories of 93,000,000 barrels, 12,000,000 more barrels "than the wholly adequate stocks we had on hand at the corresponding date in 1937." He said:

"The industry looks forward confidently to a maintenance or even a small increase in demand in 1938, in spite of the recent and current decline in general industrial activity, and in spite of a probable reduction in exports which were unusually heavy through 1937.

"With an investment already amounting to some $13,000,000,000 the industry faces the prospect of continued large capital outlays through 1938. Its normal business, therefore, will necessitate substantial purchases of material and wide employment of labor during the coming year."

Expert's Study Of Pneumonia Wins Lilly Prize

Dr. Frank L. Horsfall, jr., of the Rockefeller Foundation, was chosen last night as the scientist under 31 years of age who "accomplished the most outstanding research in bacteriology or immunology" in the United States this year.

A member of the research staff of the foundation's international health division, he was announced as the winner of the Eli Lilly Award at annual banquet of the Society of American Bacteriologists at the Hotel Mayflower. The work for which he was honored has been largely responsible for development and use of rabbit antipneumonococcus serum in treatment of pneumonia.

Award Is $1,000.

A joint committee representing that society, the American Association of Immunologists and the American Society for Experimental Pathology chose the winner, who receives $1,000 and a bronze medal. Recipient of the first award, given last year, was Dr. Harry Eagle, of Johns Hopkins Medical School.

The honor for Dr. Horsfall was based upon his investigations of the properties of immunizing serum, carried out at McGill University, where he received the M. D. degree in 1932, at Harvard University and, more recently, in the hospital of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research.

Dealing particularly with the role of lipids, or fatty substances, in immunological reactions, "the results of these studies open up a new vista in the field of immunology," said an announcement by the bacteriologist group.

Experts Disagree.

Concerning himself with pneumococcus antibodies, the minute particles within the human body which offer resistance to pneumonia, Dr. Horsfall discovered that antibodies produced in the rabbit are smaller, more mobile, less influenced by certain lipids and much more effective in protecting experimental animals than horse serum.

Although pneumonia experts are divided on the relative efficacy of horse, rabbit and other animal sera, the Rockefeller scientist's accomplishments have resulted in successful use of the rabbit-derived serum.

Additional testimony on the value of the chemical sulfanilamide in treating gonococcal infections was present at the society's afternoon session yesterday.

Reporting on studies undertaken at the National Institute of Health and Gallinger Hospital, three scientists told of a case of gonococcal meningitis, a disease which is not rare, but frequently misdiagnosed, being cured through use of the drug.

Sulfanilamide Praised.

Drs. Sara E. Branham, Reginald H. Mitchell and William Brainin said that, in this instance, the gonococcus germ had entered the patient's spinal fluid and symptoms were almost similar to those produced by the common meningococcus meningitis. It required extremely careful bacteriological study to reveal the true nature of the illness.

"Gonococcus meningitis is probably more common than it usually has been thought to be," the trio concluded.

Drs. Perrin H. Long and Eleanor A. Bliss, of Johns Hopkins Medical School, pointed out in another paper that "clinical data indicate that sulfanilamide is of definite value in the treatment of gonococcal infections in human beings."

Three bacteriologists from the University of Rochester Medical School, Harold F. Wengatz, Ruth A. Boak and Charles M. Carpenter, described investigations they are conducting to determine what action sulfanilamide has upon the gonococcus.

A bronze medal is symbol of the award which also carries $1,000 in cash, given each year to men or women under 31 for outstanding research work in bacteriology or immunology.

Irish Minister Hears Premier Proclaim Eire

Free State Passing Means Only Parking Sign Change Here.

While the setting sun painted rosy streaks across the December sky, the Irish Minister and Mrs. Michael MacWhite listened to a radio message from Dublin by Eamon de Valera, Irish premier, announcing last evening the end of the Irish Free State and the organization of its 26 counties under a new constitution into an independent state of Ireland.

Simultaneously, the British government declared that Ireland is still a member of the British Commonwealth of Nations, the Associated Press reported.

The official statement also said that the government would recognize the name of Ireland—Eire in Gaelic—as applying only to that area formerly called the Irish Free State.

In his address, marking the end of the 15-year-old Irish Free State, de Valera expressed the hope that all of Ireland—the 26 counties and Ulster—would one day be governed under the new constitution.

Hastening of the day when the new constitution embraces "the whole of the national territory," he said, is "one of the great tasks to which I would this evening summon the Irish race to dedicate itself anew."

Opposition to the proposal for a united Ireland has long been strong in the northern six counties, known as Ulster. Associated Press dispatches from Dublin stated that "northern Ireland remained stanchly determined to have no part of the constitution. There was talk of changing its name to emphasize this."

The only sign of protest in Dublin was a black flag, flying from Sinn Fein (Republican) headquarters in Parnell Square, as De Valera, bearing his new title of Taoseach, or premier, rode with his ministers to the cathedral for a votive mass.

The government press hailed the new constitution as removing "forever Britain's dark blighting shadow," but the opposition said the fact that King George's name was omitted from the document was so much "eye wash," and declared that the king would be recognized when he was needed and ignored when he was not.

The British press generally took an aloof view, but the Manchester Guardian suggested that the time might be ripe for removing the sore spot caused by maintenance of British naval stations in Ireland.

Several English papers chided De Valera on his new title, Taoseach, by comparing it to "Der Fuehrer" and "Il Duce."

In London's Regent street, J. W. Dulanty put a new bronze plate on his door announcing himself as high commissioner of Ireland and not of the Irish Free State.

At the Irish Legation here no changes will be made in the plate since it already bears that designation. Police "no parking" signs, however, will be changed in front of the legation to conform to the new title.

Postmaster General James A. Farley followed his custom yesterday of wishing all in his department here a personal "Happy New Year." It was quite a job.

Postal Chief Greets 780 Department Employes Individually at Annual Pre-New Year's Celebration; Son by His Side.

"How are you, Joe? . . . A pleasure to see you, William . . . How are you, Elizabeth? . . . A merry Christmas to you, Sarah . . . A pleasure to see you, Henry . . . You're getting a little bald on top there, Thurston . . . It's nice to see you . . . How are you? . . . How are you, Herbert?

At the end of 14 minutes, Postmaster General Farley—holding his annual pre-New Year handshake for department employes yesterday in his private, walnut-paneled office—was shaking hands so automatically that he turned by force of habit from the long line and offered his hand to a news cameraman.

He had done so much concentrated handshaking in 14 minutes that he finally spun on his heel, rubbed his elbow and shoulder and thrust his hand, absent-mindedly, several times at no one at all. It's hard to make your hand stay quiet after shaking the hand of 780 persons—more than 50 a minute. And he seemed hard put to keep from saying:

"How are you, Joe? . . . A pleasure to see you, William . . . How are you; how are you," when the long line finally was gone.

Right here, before saying anything about the speech Farley made, there should be noted the mechanics of his amazing handshaking technique. Officials who must do much handshaking have developed, perfected, a handshaking swing. This means that they grasp the outstretched hand as it approaches on the move and with a graceful facility keeps both the hand and the handshaker moving. This avoids long delays of the line, and saves the receiving handshaker the anguish of having to talk of the weather, politics or life in general with some fellow who wants to stop and talk.

With such a technique, Farley has no patience. He takes the hand after it reaches him and holds on to it a moment, as if he doesn't care whether someone stops and bores him. The other feature is his renowned memory for names, which was in flower yesterday. He called them Joe and Mary and Betty and Jim; he remarked on how some were losing their hair; he sent them all off smiling. And he looked pretty happy himself!

His annual handshake and greeting began with a mail-route promptness at 3 p. m. in the walnut-paneled and red-carpeted reception hall adjoining his private office. They packed it, overflowed into the corridor. Some of them were so far away they couldn't hear the speech, so here it is, in substance:

"I want to thank you for your support in the past year. . . . Every person in the department has made a contribution to its success; and nowhere is there more confidence in anything than in the United States Postoffice Department. . . . You have been kind and considerate to me, and above all else you have been loyal. . . . I will always be grateful to you. . . ."

His son—9-year-old Jim Farley, jr.—stood by him when the handshaking began. Several persons turned from Jim Farley, sr., to Jim Farley, jr., with outstretched hand. But the child declined the amenities.

Bob Burns Says—

I was just reading where this country is one of the biggest exporters in the world but still we have 'ta depend upon foreign ships to carry our goods. If them foreign countries ever get mad at us and refuse us transportation, we would find ourselves in about the same fix that my uncle was with his hardware store down home.

One day a big game hunter come through town and he dropped in at my uncle's store and said "I want fifty cases of ammunition. I usually deal with the Eastern distributors but I would like to give you the business if you can handle it." My uncle says "Why sure—I can take care of you." The hunter says "Well, send the fifty cases to Nigeria in Africa."

My uncle says, "Well, mister, in that case, maybe you'd better order it from the East—all we've got here is a small boy and a bicycle"

Jackson Fears Business Strike To Kill New Deal

U. S. Attorney Sees Plot by 'Monopolies' in Protest Against Laws.

As a result of Jackson's vigorous attacks on business, apparently with the President's approval, the stage for the convening of Congress next week was being set amid heated controvery over what the Government's attitude toward business should be.

Developments yesterday included a report on Capitol Hill that the President at a recent Cabinet meeting had indorsed in principle the O'Mahoney-Borah bill for Federal licensing of corporations doing an interstate business but that he held the measure did not go far enough.

In what respect the President thought the O'Mahoney-Borah bill deficient was not revealed. That measure would forbid licensing of any corporation operating in violation of the antitrust laws or contrary to a set of standards, including abolition of child labor. There is no minimum wage or maximum hour requirement in the bill and so New Dealers regard that omission as a deficiency, especially in view of defeat of the Administration hours and wages bill in the House.

Attorney-General Homer S. Cummings, denied during the day he was opposed, as reported, to the O'Mahoney-Borah bill, but he asserted his statement did not mean he was an advocate of the measure. Asserting he favored tightening of the antitrust laws, Cummings said Federal licensing of corporations was one of the most potent weapons the Administration could use toward that end—but he thought the matter required further detailed study.

Lobby Inquiry Urged.

Another development of the day was a demand by Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, that the Senate resume its lobby investigation in order to expose "organized propaganda" against the Roosevelt legislative program. Norris predicted such an investigation would "bring out things that would open the eyes of the country."

As Jackson in Philadelphia was assailing big business, Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper here issued a conciliatory statement reviewing the close of the year and prospects for the future. He called for "patience, intelligent thinking, co-operation and control of those forces that would tend to destroy our solidarity and protection at home."

Asserting that "our capitalistic system, with its profit and loss accompaniments, must be preserved in adjusted fashion for greater equity for all concerned," Roper contended, "the safeguarding of the profit motive, with due regard for all concerned, is thus the mutual responsibility of Government and business."

"When unfair monopolistic practices are engaged in and cannot be corrected through normal competitive procedure," Roper said, "then the Government must protect the rights of the public through regulatory agencies, as has already been illustrated through the creation of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission. The regulatory activities of the Government are not, therefore, directed at mere size of the individual business unit, but at abuses."

Reaction on Capitol Hill toward the Administration's new attack on business, as exemplified in the Jackson speeches, was mixed, although absences, due to the Congressional recess, made it impossible to obtain a fair cross-section of sentiment.

Clark Assails Curbs.

Representative D. Worth Clark, (Democrat), of Idaho—prominently mentioned recently as a candidate for the seat of Senator Pope of that State in next year's election—declared over the National Broadcasting System that "one of the very grave mistakes we have made in the last four years has been the ill-treatment of business."

"Many of our demagogues," he said, "have seized upon the sins of some of the 'overlords of business' as an excuse for scourging and frightening all business . . . When you indict business you indict a whole people. When you frighten it or when you stifle its activities you ruin the farmer, the merchant, the lawyer, the doctor and the laborer alike. That is exactly what we have done in the last few years."

Clark said he did not "defend the abuses of business" and that he had a most thorough contempt for certain gigantic monopolistic enterprises that are eating at the vitals of the American consumer by means of artificial combinations and price-fixing agreements." But he held business "is not bad merely because it is big."

Government Biggest Monopoly.

"Sometimes when it becomes big, however, it obtains a monopoly upon the things which the consumer needs," the Idahoan continued. "These monopolies do everything which the biggest monopoly of all, namely, Government, does and that is destroy the American system. . . . It is just as necessary, therefore, if business confidence is to be restored, and if business spending is to be revived, that a few huge, stifling monopolies be curbed as it is that Government correct the errors which it has made in the past few years."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, author of the Federal licensing bill, asserted he was more interested in correcting the defects in the present system and stimulating the Nation's consumptive ability than in talking about misdeeds of the past.

"My feeling," he asserted, "is that we should not be concerned with assessing responsibility for what has happened but that we should be mightily concerned in correcting the situation."

Senator Frederick Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, observed the fight between so-called big business and the Government "is ruining small business, which is the backbone of the country." He contended that "if there are monopolies that exist contrary to law, our present antitrust laws are sufficient to cope with them.

On the other hand, Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said he was inclined to agree with Jackson that the real danger to the country is in a concentration of wealth leading to "private regimentation of industry, finance and commerce."

Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, asserted that "too many factors contributed to our present economic conditions to assume that any one of them is the cause." Senator Alva Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, said he has never been satisfied that big business deliberately brought about a financial depression "any more than people in politics would court defeat or labor unemployment."

Recession Held Minor.

"I am convinced," he asserted, "the recession is a minor and not a major depression. We all know big business is very jittery toward the Administration. There has been apprehension and fear and they have genuinely frightened each other."

Representative Samuel B. Pettingill (Democrat), Indiana, disavowed any defense of monopoly but suggested that Jackson and other Administration critics of business "pluck the mote out of their own eyes before looking for beams in their neighbors'." He urged that "Government very honestly examine its own program, adopt a policy conciliatory to all honest business and then stand by it."

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), New York, was quoted by the Associated Press as saying that the Jackson's speeches was "a clear indication of the Administration's attitude of hate and suspicion against business interests and justifies the fear and uncertainty that exists throughout the Nation. He argued that the closing of steel mills and automomible plants resulted from "economic fallacies of the New Deal that have come home to roost," adding that "confidence has been locked out by unsound Administration policies."

Hits 'Aristocratic' Anarchy.

Taking as his topic "The Menace to Free Enterprise," Jackson commenced his Philadelphia address with the statement that teh philosophy of big business must be found in its conduct, rather than in its doctrines.

"Certain groups of big business," he asserted, "have now seized upon a recession in our prosperity to 'liquidate the New Deal' and to throw off all Governmental interference with their incorporated initiative and their 'aristocratic anarchy.'"

Quoting Sir Arthur Salter, British economist, as saying in the current Yale Quarterly Review that "it is not fanciful to suggest that there is something like a 'strike of capital' against political action which it fears and dislikes," Jackson asserted that "if this is correct the Government faces a general strike."

The Assistant Attorney General indicated a belief in the Salter assertion because "nowhere in the press that speaks for big business have I seen this analysis repudiated," and because he had seen in Washington plenty of evidence that big business has seized this explanation of the recession as a cudgel to whack concessions out of Government."

"Now the things they strike against are the things that won the increasing majorities in 1932, 1934 and 1936. Do these big business men think they can strike down a whole program that so held the hopes of men without arousing bitter resentment? The wrath of the people has been rising as they have seen Uncle Same told to stick up his hands and deliver over his utilities program, his monopoly program, his social security program and his tax program to one or another interested group?

Jackson then undertook to trace the growing power of big business over the standard of living, wages and economic opportunities of the people. He said that in 1929 about 200 nonfinancial corporations controlled 49 per cent of the assets of all such corporations, and four years later this percentage had been increased to 56. The 200 largest corporations were directed nominally by 2,000 individuals, but actually were controlled by a "much smaller" number of men, he said.

These managers, he contended, so mismanaged the general policy of the American system of private enterprise as to bring it to a point where the New Deal had to step in to save the system.

"The blunt truth is that today we have in command of big business by and large the same bourbons who were in command of the defeat of 1929," Jackson said. "They have learned nothing and forgotten nothing. As the President said in Chicago during the campaign, these bourbons now feel strong enough to throw their crutches at the doctor."

He sought to refute the contention of some industrial leaders that rising labor costs brought on the recession. Insisting that "labor has had nowhere near the percentage advance that big business has given to its own darlings," Jackson cited the salaries of two General Motors Corporation officials. He said Alfred P. Sloan, former president of the company, received $201,472.75 in 1934, $374,505 in 1935 and $561,311 in 1936. His successor, William S. Knudsen, was paid $211,128.53 in 1934, $374,475 in 1935 and $507,645 in 1936.

Citing a list of what he termed "astounding profits" which various corporations had reported in 1936, in comparison to their 1932 losses and profits, Jackson asserted big business "has merely been saved from ruin and restored to arrogance" by the New Deal.

"The unvarnished truth," he added, "is that the Government's recovery program has succeeded nowhere elso so effectively as in restoring the profits of big business. Labor has had no such advance. The small merchant has had no such prosperity. The small manufacturer had had no such advantage.

"The only just criticism that can be made of the economic operations of the New Deal is that it set out a breakfast for the canary and let the cat steal it; it did not sufficiently guard against recovery from the raids of the monopolist. One group in the United States that has no cause for complaint is the big-business group."

received from the Rubens, said they were going on to Moscow.

The passport photograph of Ruth Marie Rubens, of New York, said to answer generally the description of the mysterious "Mrs. Ruth Norma Robinson," who, with her husband disappeared in Moscow last month, has been dispatched to the American Embassy in Moscow for positive identification.

In announcing this action last night, the State Department made known, however, that a passport application executed by an "Adolph Arnold Rubens," of New York, was not issued to a genuine Adolph Arnold Rubens, Chicago machinist, although the real Rubens and the evidence of citizenship submitted by "Rubens" correspond.

The Chicago Rubens has told the department he has never applied for or received a passport and has no knowledge of the person using his name.

The department denied yesterday the Rubens and Robinsons had been positively identified as the same couple.

Sailed on Same Day.

Ruth Marie Rubens and her husband, "Adolph Arnold Rubens," sailed from New York aboard the Italian liner Rex on the day "Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Robinson" are supposed to have sailed, although the ship's passenger list does not record the Robinsons.

The Rubens' passport application was executed by "Adolph Arnold Rubens" at the same place and on the same date that the Robinsons applied for theirs.
